PIRATES, LED BY A WOMAN, VANISH AWAY IN BIAS BAY

Band Escapes In Junks And Sampans With $50,000 Loot

MANY WOUNDED

Two Indian Watchmen Die Trying To Save Passengers

(China Press Service)

Hongkong, Nov. 22.—No trace has been found of the pirates who seized the steamer Sui An, killed two of the Indian watchmen, wounded several of the passengers and shot the captain and other officers.

The pirates and their woman leader, with loot valued at upwards of $50,000, are reported to have scattered in the various coves near Bias Bay. What further measures for their capture will be taken has not been learned from the authorities.

DETAILS OF PIRACY

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Hongkong, Nov. 21.—The passengers of the steamer Sui An narrate thrilling accounts of the pirates' brutal assaults and rough handling from which even the ladies were not spared. Many had narrow escapes from stray bullets, one of which was thought to have hit the French Father Caysac, from Kwangsi. It is reported that one Chinese passenger got frightened and jumped overboard.

All the passengers highly praise the Indians who forfeited their lives in a desperate effort to save others. It is stated that none of the passengers escaped the attention of the pirates. Some of them, however, had a few articles returned. Many hid their valuables though several, threatened with death, eventually gave up theirs. A portion of the Macao mail is missing.

Passengers were searched by the police before leaving Hongkong on Sunday morning.

ESCAPE IN BOATS

A big sea was running when the pirates left the ship. The commadore, for whom the pirates made a diligent search, evaded them by masquerading as a passenger. He says that he noticed a sudden blaze on a hill, after which fourteen boats appeared, to which the plunder, estimated at a total value of $50,000, was transferred.

The purser of the Sui An, interviewed by Reuter's correspondent, said that at 6.15 p.m. on Sunday, while collecting tickets, he heard shots from different parts of the ship and saw the pirates holding up the officers and passengers. Two Indians, showing fight, were shot at and killed by the pirates and their bodies thrown overboard. Two other Indians were seriously wounded.

The pirates drove the saloon passengers, who were completely surprised, to one side of the ship, where they robbed them of their jewellery, money and valuables. Ladies fainted and the men had their hands up, overawed by the pirates who pointed revolvers in their faces and fired at the deck.

STRIP PASSENGERS

Meanwhile the pirates from the second class climbed to the upper deck and bustled the passengers to the cabins, saloons and lavatory, where they were confined all night long, without food and unable to sleep. They were periodically visited by the pirates, who thoroughly stripped them of everything of value, in some cases even hats, boots and coats being stolen. Those showing resistance were shot.

Mr. Hawthorne, one of the passengers, tried to grapple with a pirate but was shot at and seriously wounded. A French priest was shot in the thigh. One Portuguese and one Chinese passenger were wounded.

Captain A. R. Bliss, rushing along the deck from the stern, had just reached the bridge when he was shot and seriously wounded. The First Officer, who was doing duty at the time, was wounded. The pirates compelled several Europeans at the point of the revolver to steer the ship. One of the gang went below and, after wounding the Chief Engineer, Mr. Cullen, mounted guard over the others in the engineroom.

Smiles from the Mixed Court

BY J. L. BUTTS

If consistency be a virtue, as numerous philosophers have contended, then a large wreath of bay is owing to a party named Wong who appeared in the Mixed Court yesterday and demonstrated his determination to new to the line no matter who is disconcerted by the chips.

Wong was accused of passing counterfeit dollars on various shop keepers and the latter brought a heavy load of evidence to lay against him. The defendant stated in rebuttal that he had no suspicion the coins were bad. He had obtained them at a presumably reliable exchange shop, and if his confidence had proved misplaced surely he was a candidate for commiserations rather than prosecution. So they fined him $2 and led him away to the tribunal's accounting department, where he dished up a brace of shining Yuans and was released.

Shortly thereafter a horrifying idea wriggled into being in the mind of the custodian of the court funds. He snatched open the till and conducted an autopsy on the two dollars which Wong had turned in. They were precisely as full of defects as those passed on the shop keepers.

JUST ONE MORE

Sounds of revelry by night issuing from a wineshop in the Dong Ka Loong attracted the attention of the C.P.C. on beat. Glancing at his nifty enamelled wrist-watch he noted that the hour was considerably post-midnight.

"What's the idea?" he inquired of Koo Ah-men, the genial proprietor of the samshu palace. "Ain't you aware that the doch an' dorus limit is 12 o'clock?"

"Sure," said Koo, "but this is no mere mercenary attempt to collar a few cash after hours. Everybody here is a friend of the house. I can't shoo 'em into the street, can I?"

Koo's easy-going hospitality set set him back $5, aside from the costs of the treats.

THE POINT OF VIEW

The C.P.C. was still very indignant when the case of Ng Tao-sung was called.

"He threw a tubful of dirty water off the balcony above his shop at 279 Thibet Road last night—in defiance of the Municipal regulations—and I was under the balcony," frothed the officer of the law.

Ng was just as indignant as the policeman.

"The water wasn't dirty," he retorted, "I had only washed my face in it."

And the twain continued to splutter after the court had ordered Ng to pay a $1 fine.

Expect Reply Soon On Reconstitution Of The Mixed Court

Negotiations with regard to the reconstitution of the Shanghai International Mixed Court have already been entered into with the Diplomatic Body and a reply is expected in the near future, according to a message sent by the Waichiaopu to the various local organisations which have been agitating for such a step.

When the matter was first taken up with the Diplomatic Corps, the latter expressed the view that before any definite decision could be reached it would be necessary for some investigation to be made in Shanghai in order to examine the various aspects of the problem. It is believed that the necessary information is now in the possession of the Diplomatic Corps as a result of the personal investigation made by the Portuguese Minister, Doyen of the Diplomatic Corps, who recently visited Shanghai.

Peking Ministry Defines Attitude Regarding The China Merchants' Matter

Declares Communications Board Functions As Highest Authority Over It And Has Full Supervisory Power

Because of the protests sent by local organisations in connection with the case of the China Merchants' Steam Navigation Company and the reports of the alleged government plan to mortgage the company, the Ministry of Communications yesterday sent a lengthy telegram to the local press, defining its own attitude in the matter.

A translation of the text of the telegram follows:

"Petitions have been filed by shareholders of the China Merchants' Steam Navigation against the present directors of the company, Fu Chung-yao (Siao-en) and others, charging them with negligence causing loss of lives infringing upon the navigation rights of the country, corruption and embezzlement of public property, with the presidential house as well as this ministry. This ministry is one which is essentially concerned with the operation of all commercial vessels, in which are carried lives and property.

"The China Merchants' Steam Navigation Company, Ltd., is the largest commercial steamship company in our country. Government subsidy was given when it was first established. In the beginning, much difficulty had to be experienced and much government support had to be given before it could be organised.

"Now that allegations of corruption have been made, how can the ministry remain non-committal in this matter? Before the records of the company are quite clear on the question of government control, while the administration is left to the shareholders themselves. The articles of association were promulgated by an Imperial mandate in the third year of the Hsuan Tung regime. Article 3 states that officers of the Ministry shall supervise the operation of the company. Article 24 says that in case of incapability or corruption on the part of the directors, the officers of the ministry delegated to supervise the company shall report the facts to the ministry. Article 29 says all sums of money in the form of capital or income must be accounted for and a report of their conditions must be filed with the ministry for the purpose of reference.

"This shows that this ministry functions as the highest organ of supervision over the company and even if there were no charges brought against the administration, this ministry has full power of supervising and investigating the conditions of the accounts and the conduct of the directors. Moreover, charges have been made before this ministry by shareholders. These charges are of a very serious nature.

"As to the general practice of foreign countries, the common commercial code is applicable in cases where there are no special regulations. But in the case of the China Merchants' there are special regulations. We need not resort to the usual commercial code. The request for the appointment of a special commission to inquire into the matter was based first, on the repeated petitions of the shareholders of the company and second, ordered by the president.

"This ministry has been most careful in this particular case. The subject was brought up by the ministry at the Cabinet meeting, which decided to take the action, which aims to improve the operation of steamship companies, take precaut-

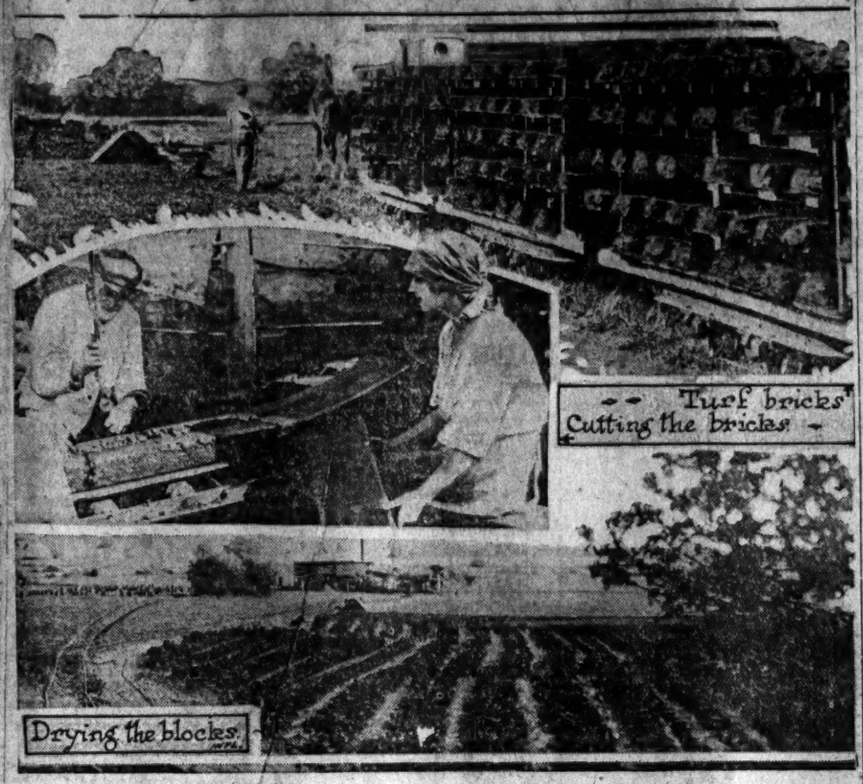
McDERMOTT CASE BRINGS REQUEST BY MUNICIPALITY

Ask Consular Body For Protection In Connection With Arrests

As a consequence of the case in which Mr. McDermott recently obtained judgment against the Municipal Council, the Council has addressed the Consular Body with regard to better protection of the Municipality in connection with police action taken at the request of the various Consular or Court officials.

The matter was discussed at the Council meeting of November 15 and it was decided to place the facts of the case before the Consular Body, urging the need for protection of the Council against the possibility of damage claims in respect of police action under similar circumstances and suggesting that such protection could best be secured by the adoption of a uniform procedure, requiring a warrant to be furnished to the police in every case in which arrest is involved.

Germany Has Substitute For Coal And Wood



Turf bricks' Cutting the bricks

Drying the blocks

SHORTAGE of coal and wood in Germany has been overcome by the making of turf bricks for fuel purposes. A special process to which the blocks are subjected makes them give the requisite degree of heat. The dirt and dust are gathered in the fields and undesirable matter eliminated by machinery. The fuel is then dried out and formed into blocks.

TEACHER FACES PROSECUTION ON CITIZENSHIP ISSUE

Former American School Instructor To Appear In French Mixed Court

Mrs. Richard Touche, [illegible] in French at the American school will be tried this morning in the French Mixed Court on the charge of impersonating a French citizen, the charges preferred by the French authorities.

Mr. Touche was married on September 28 to Miss Nina Verbetzkaya, a Russian, at Holy Trinity Cathedral and after the marriage signed the church register giving his nationality as French. No civil ceremony was performed, as required by French law, and the marriage was not registered at the Consulate, it is charged.

The trial grew out of charges preferred against Mr. Touche last week by his wife who is suing him for divorce. Mr. Touche was arrested by French Police last Friday at 11:30 p.m. at his home, 28 Range Road on charges preferred by his wife that he deceived her as to his nationality, that he falsified a public document, and that he stole a dress belonging to her. In the Mixed Court last Saturday, Assessor Blackburn and Magistrate Kwan waived jurisdiction on a motion of Mr. A. Fishman, who represented Mrs. Touche's interests, that the charges of the French Government having a prior claim, should therefore be tried at the French Mixed Court.

M. de la Prade, of the French Consulate, will sit on the bench at today's action, since under the French code misrepresentation of citizenship is a criminal offense and liable to heavy penalties. The case is scheduled for 9 a.m. and doubtless will prove interesting since several moot points of law will be brought up regarding not only the authenticity of Mr. Touche's citizenship, but whether the marriage ceremony performed within the Church of England is valid, despite the fact that it is a State Church when there is no civil ceremony as required by French law.

Mr. Touche since his arrest has remained in the French jail as Assessor Crepin refused to set bond at the preliminary hearing last Saturday. According to the French Police, Mr. Touche was born at Riga, Russia, of parents, probably German. Since he has been employed by the American school he lived in the school building until his marriage, when he moved to Range Road. At the School it was understood that he was a Lett.

DE GRAAF NAMED

(Reuter's Service)

The Hague, Nov. 21.—The appointment has been gazetted of Dr. de Graaff at present Minister in Tokio, as Netherlands Minister in Washington and Havana.

Cousin Of Italy's King In Shanghai To Join Ship

His Royal Highness Prince Aimone de Savoia, Duc di Spoleto, Lieutenant Commander in the Royal Italian Navy and cousin of King Victor Emmanuel of Italy, arrived yesterday afternoon on the Pacific Mail liner President Wilson to join H. M. S. Sebastiano Caboto here.

Although he arrived incognito he was met by Signor G. de' Rossi, Italian Consul-General, Commander Caccio of H. M. S. Calabria, Commander Da Lara and Lieutenants Salare and Cefferin, all of H.M.S. Carlotto. Prince Aimone was accompanied by his A.D.C., Lieu. Adalberto Mariano, an old school friend who attended the Royal Italian Naval Academy at Leghorne at the same time.

Prince Aimone is a splendid tall youth of some twenty-three years, very pleasing manners, and a winning smile. He graciously declined to be interviewed but instructed Lieut. Mariano to act as his mouthpiece. Passengers on board the President Wilson characterised His Royal Highness as a good sport, saying that he entered all the deck games and other amusements with great spirit. He won three prizes in the deck games including the potato race, the "three-legged race" and the shuffle board championship.

Lieut. Mariano stated that it was the first time Prince Aimone had visited the Orient and that he found the life intensely interesting. The trip was made via the United States in order that His Royal Highness might see as much of the world as possible before returning to the grind of life aboard a battleship.

In New York, Chicago, and San Francisco, entertainments were given in his honor, which for the most part were strictly private affairs, owing to the incognito ban. Prince Aimone lost his heart to the American girls, according to Lieut. Mariano, but believed in the old adage that "there is safety in numbers." He had been frequently quizzed in America as to whether or not he had lost his heart, but gave assurance that his difficulty had been that he was not able to select only one.

In Honolulu, Princess Liliokuolani gave a Hawaiian banquet in his honor, which included some thirty separate dishes followed by native music and dancing. According to Lieut. Mariano, Prince Aimone was highly impressed with the wonderful colorful display and extended a cordial invitation to Princess Liliokuolani to visit his native land.

Prince Irito, brother of the Emperor of Japan, met Prince Aimone at Kobe and conveyed his Royal Brother's best wishes and salutations and extended the lavish hospitality of Japan to the visiting son of the Royal house of Italy. The Prince stayed two days in Kobe, the center of the artistic life of Nippon where a dinner was given in his honor by Dr. S. N. Hinoshi, Director of Public Works. A Japanese orchestra furnished the music for the dance of the Geisha girls which proved highly attractive to His Royal Highness.

Prince Aimone expects to remain in the Orient for a two year tour of duty on board H.M.S. Sebastiano Caboto, and during that time plans an extended trip into the hinterland of China.

His father is the Duca d'Aosta and his mother the Duchess of Orleans. Prince Aimone was sent for three years to Winchester school in England, before entering the Royal Naval Academy at Leghorne.

COUNCIL MAY ACT IN CHILD LABOR PROBLEM

Show Sympathy Toward Movement But Point Out Difficulties

Mr. H. G. Simms, Chairman of the Municipal Council, has expressed his sympathy with the movement to better conditions under which children work in Shanghai and has suggested that the Council take the lead by showing itself sympathetic with the movement, according to the Municipal Gazette, out today.

Mr. Simms reported to the Council that he had had a conference with Miss A. Harrison of the Y. M. C. A., who is keenly interested in the question of child labor, and that while he pointed out to her some of the difficulties with which the question was beset, largely due to the fact that unless restrictions were placed on child labor outside the Settlement it was hopeless to put any restrictions within the Settlement, he was in sympathy with the movement.

Members of the Council are in agreement with the Chairman, the Gazette reports, but from the views expressed by them it is apparent that they are of the opinion that if any good is to be achieved it can only be by bringing together foreign and Chinese mill owners inside and outside the Settlement. The Council members however, are not optimistic of the result of such a conference as they feel that child labor is forced on the children by the parents in order to contribute toward the family expenses and can be checked only by gradual education.

Lausanne, Nov. 21.—The Conference opened at 11 o'clock this morning at the Hotel de Chateau at Ouchy. The police rigorously excluded the public.

Earl Curzon was elected President of today's sitting. It has been decided that the Allies shall take the presidency alternately.

The Conference adjourned at 1 o'clock this afternoon till four o'clock.

Eight delegations and the American observer were present at this morning's session. Earl Curzon will preside over the first commission, Marquis Garroni over the second and M. Barrere over the third.

The Turks raised the question of the invitation to Russia and the Black Sea Powers. All agreed on the importance of their participation but it was pointed out that Russia had not replied to the invitation.

MAY WORK IN SECRET

(Reuter's Service)

London, Nov. 21.—Yesterday's conference proceedings at Lausanne were merely formal. The first business act has been the constitution of three commissions to deal (1) with military and territorial questions; (2) with financial and economic problems and (3) with minorities and the capitulations, respectively presided over by an Englishman, a Frenchman and an Italian.

An unconfirmed report states that the Allies have decided to keep the work of the Conference secret and to create an Inter-Allied press bureau to scrutinize the news. Westminster approves the idea in the light of happenings at previous conferences.

U. S. IS FACING ENORMOUS LOSS SAYS HARDING

Ship Subsidy Bill Must Be Passed, His Message To Congress

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, Nov. 21.—President Harding in an address to the joint session of Congress declared that the passage of the Ship Subsidy Bill was imperative if staggering Government losses were to be avoided.

He recognised that there was determined hostility to the measure but he felt that there were no other means to create a great American Merchant Marine. President Harding estimated that $20,000,000 yearly would cover the cost of the subsidy. He remarked that the maritime nations of the world were in complete accord with American opposition towards the measure but the position should be considered from the view point of American interests.

The Committee of the House of Representatives has reported on the Ship Subsidy Bill with sundry amendments, the chief of which provides for larger compensation to mail-carrying ships to offset possible loss under the prohibition ruling.

STRIKERS RIOT IN POOTUNG; FOUR INJURED

Mob Of 5,000 Causes Police Reinforcements To Be Called

Labor conditions in Pootung are still unsettled through the failure of a complete settlement of the demands of the 4,000 workers on strike and 150 additional policemen have been placed on duty in the strike area by the Chinese authorities.

The reinforcements were put on duty as a result of riots that occured at the mills over the week-end. In one the homes of two interpreters were smashed up by a mob of 500. Two of the alleged ringleaders have been arrested. The employes had made a demand that the interpreters be dismissed because of alleged squeezing.

In another riot in which 5,000 strikers are said to have taken part the home of the compradore was broken into, his safe looted of 26 ounces of gold and several pieces of jewelry, and two men and two women injured when the bayonets of some of the police on guard were taken away from them.

The strike involves employes of the Japan-China Cotton Mills and the British Cigarette Company factories of the B.A.T.

He Declines Naming Ministers Of Health And Labor To Receive Them

(Reuter's Service)

London, Nov. 22.—Some apprehension is felt regarding a parade of 100,000 unemployed promised for today, including considerable contingents who marched from the provinces. The leaders have threatened to march to Downing Street if Mr. Bonar Law does not consent to receive a deputation. Mr. Bonar Law firmly declines to do so, pointing out that the Ministers of Labor and Health, who are willing to receive a deputation, are empowered to act on behalf of the Government. The police, meanwhile, have forbidden the procession to approach the vicinity of Parliament.

against the loss of life and property and to protect the interest of the shareholders. There is absolutely no ulterior motive.

"For fear that some people and some shareholders may not understand the real spirit of us of the ministry and for fear that some undesirable directors of the company might spread ill-reports about our intentions, in order that they may still usurp the power of the directorate of the company and so that the corruptive condition of the company lasting 40-odd years may remain without being given a proper airing, thus reflecting seriously upon the rights of the nation, the interest of the shareholders and the means of communication, this ministry therefore has undertaken to define its position in detail.

"It should be understood that this action has a strong bearing upon the real interest of the shareholders and is taken by this ministry without the slightest bit of spirit of aggression. Because, the onus is on us to perform our responsibilities, we are obliged to do this even in the face of laboricus work and abusive protest. The feeling over this matter has been running high. It is not for us to suppress it with our hand.

"The shareholders are requested to give us their sincere co-operation and assist us where our power and energy are unable to reach. The various local interests should voice an opinion based on conscience and sense of justice. Your love for the company should be no less than your love for the nation. If by this act of the government, we are able to eliminate the corruptive factors and secure an honest administration for the company, the responsibility of this ministry ends right there and the status quo of the company will be maintained to the letter. We are resolved not to interfere or to make changes.

"Not only the shareholders shall permanently be assured of their due share of profit, but also life and property will be guaranteed that security which they should enjoy. Besides making public the documents pertaining to the case, which we shall publish on a later date, we wire this statement to you beforehand in order that any misunderstanding may be removed and ignorance dispelled."

A circular telegram has been sent out by certain shareholders of the China Merchants' Steam Navigation Co. with Mr. Chang Chien heading the list. The telegram is addressed to the President, the Cabinet, Inspector-General Tsao Kun, General Lu Yung-hsiang and the Civil Governor of Chekiang, the Tuchun and the Civil Governor of Kiangsu and the Defence Commissioner Ho Feng-lin.

The shareholders protest against the arbitrary action of the Chiaotungpu or Ministry of Communications in ordering the arrest of Mr. Fu Hsiao-an, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the China Merchants' Steam Navigation Company, with nothing but some flimsy evidence to go on. The shareholders declare that the complaint made against Mr. Fu to the Chiaotungpu was filed by persons who claim to be shareholders in the Company but are not so in actual fact and that the charges made against Mr. Fu are unsupported by genuine evidence.

They also protest against the action of the Chiaotungpu on the further ground that the Ministry said that it would institute investigations and, this being so, the order of the arrest is as premature as it is unjustified.

A special committee has been formed for the protection of the interests of the shareholders and for the taking of counter-measures against undue interference by the Ministry with the affairs of a mercantile concern.

The Eastern Times had the following yesterday:

Recently the different interests are paying a great deal of attention to the case of the China Merchants' Steam Navigation Company. According to the opinion of a certain Lui Yu-sing, an organisation known as the "Peoples' Association of Shipping Protection" should be established. His reasons are as follows:

"1. The China Merchants' Steam Navigation Company concerns the people of the whole country. It is the greatest shipping company in China. It has unique relations to the welfare of the country so the citizens must give it their united protection. The privilege of the shareholders of the company is small, yet the relation of shipping enterprise of the country is really great.

"2 In the present crisis of China Merchants' Steam Navigation Company, newspapers report that the government attempts to nationalise and mortgage the company for foreign loans. Such information may not be without reasons. In case this becomes a fact, the great and valuable shipping enterprise must be turned over to the hands of foreigners. Recently different opinions exist among the shareholders. The hidden trouble is bursting out and the entanglement within is reaching its climax. This is not only a misfortune for the China Merchants' Steam Navigation Company but also a great danger to the future welfare of China's navigation.

"3 Unless the people unite with effort and plan to help and save the present situation, the scheme of the government to encroach upon and get hold of the company whose shareholders are engaged in fighting with one another could not be frustrated. A strong united organisation should be immediately established in order to protect the shipping enterprise of the country.

"4. The duties and obligation of the Association should be as follows:

"a. To use every effort to resist the greedy desire of the government and to maintain the company entirely under merchants management.

"b. To arouse the sentiment of the people and to awaken the shareholders to the impending danger.

"c. To get rid of the faults and weakness of the company. To plan with one heart for reform and enlargement of the company's business.

"In view of the above and in consideration of the present crisis, it is incumbent on us to be up and doing to protect this only shipping company from falling into foreign hands. Such responsibility as is clear does not solely lie upon the present government and shareholders but upon every citizen of the country as well.

"I, therefore, present herewith my opinion of establishing such an association. Let those who favor this movement get together, so that some united action may be taken."

"Every American Everywhere A Member."

Dr. Eddy has spoken to student leaders all over the world and the meeting has been arranged especially for student leaders. Admission is by tickets only. Returned students who have not yet received invitations may procure their tickets from Mr. Lum, at the Boys' Annex of the Y.M.C.A.

Dr. Eddy will address a joint meeting of the members of the Employers' Federation and Cotton Mill Owners' Association of China tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock at the foreign general chamber of commerce, 1 Yuen Ming Yuen Road. Mr. E. F. MacKay will occupy the chair.

The Rev. Brewer Eddy addressed American School students yesterday morning, on the subject of the Washington Conference. He pointed to the friendship of the American people towards China, and the changing attitude of Japan towards both China and the United States.

"During the Washington Conference last year, when Mr. Elihu Root desired the strongest possible argument for the 'open door' in China, he turned to the Missionary Boards, and they prepared an argument based on America's friendship for China, without any reference to the commercial interests which had long been regarded as a strong point in all diplomatic negotiations. It was, in fact, the Christian people of America, willing to help China on an altruistic basis, that made possible the Washington Conference.

"The missionary is the apostle of international friendship. Billions were spent during the War, and yet conditions were not relieved; a fraction of that amount spent on Mission schools and hospitals brings on friendship with the United States, and causes the good feelings that exists between the two countries.

"The change of attitude in Japan is a striking result of the Conference. She is today trying to undo the damage done in China, and striving to win the friendship of America and Great Britain, which is essential to her peace and safety.

"America today feels her responsibility as one of the greatest nations in the world, and it is to America that the world looks to assume a position of leadership. America alone is capable of saving the situations in Europe and Asia."

THE UNPLANTED SEED

Until a seed is planted in the earth, watered, watched over, caused to grow—it has no power of multiplication.

Money of itself is only so much metal. Hoarded and hidden away it is but an inert lump, of no productive value to its owner. But invested by him in safe securities it will nearly double itself in 10 years, quadruple itself in 20 years and amount to nearly eight times its original figure in 30 years.

PASS NEAR HONGKONG

The Sui An passed about five miles south of Hongkong, with all lights out. The passengers saw the lights of Hongkong but were absolutely helpless.

Early in the morning the Sui An reached a small island north of Bias Bay. After obtaining all that was possible from the passengers the pirates ransacked the ship, taking even the cutlery, plates, linen, blankets, etc. The pirates then prepared to depart but they were determined to rob the safes before leaving. They demanded the keys but were unable to locate the purser or the compradore. Finally they broke open the safes and stole about $3,000 from the Compradore's safe and $600 from the Purser's.

At 6.30 a number of junks and sampans came alongside in which the pirates left with their booty. When they were a little way off the pirates fired a volley over the ship, cheered in farewell and made off to land.

WOMAN LEADER SHOT

The Purser states that the pirates were under the direction of a Chinese woman who was shot and wounded by a European before their escape. Three other pirates were wounded in the fray between the passengers and the pirates. The pirates boarded the ship at Hongkong and returned in the afternoon from Macao. Some of them donned masks. All were armed with revolvers and in a few minutes the whole ship was completely under their control. The Sui An was without wireless. It is reported that three majis are missing. An Indian passenger was forced to act as interpreter for the pirates.

After the departure of the pirates the First Officer with the help of European passengers steered the ship to Hongkong and hoisted a signal of distress as soon as she was sighted by the Waglan lighthouse. Hongkong was informed by wireless and the Heungshan with police and a doctor on board was sent out.

On the arrival of the Sui An the wounded were taken to hospital. The passengers, who were worn out with fatigue and hunger, landed at 2 o'clock and were welcomed on the wharf by a huge crowd.

DIET and HEALTH

Food is as important to the sick person as medicine, more so in most cases. A badly chosen diet may retard recovery.

In health the natural appetite is the best guide to follow; in sickness the appetite is often fickle and depraved.

Proper food and a good tonic will keep most people in good health. Dr. Williams's pink pills for pale people are the most popular tonic medicine in the world, harmless, non-alcoholic, and certain in their action, which is to build up the blood and to restore vitality to the run-down system. For growing girls who become thin and pale, for pale tired men and women, for old people who fail in strength, Dr. Williams' pink pills are an ideal tonic.

If your blood is thin and watery, if your digestion gives you trouble, if you have rheumatic pains, an aching back, nervous headaches, a general sense of inefficiency or weakness, you will do well to begin Dr. Williams' pink pills today. Any medicine dealer can supply you, or one bottle will be sent to you for $1.50, six for $8.00, by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 96 Szechuen Road, Shanghai.

To enable those who give these pills a trial to observe intelligent care in the diet, the Dr. Williams' Co. will send on request free. The helpful little book "Hobbies and Health."

"Smilin' Thru"

"A jealous god that visiteth the sins of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation."

When Allen Langdon wrote "Smilin' Thru" I imagine he had these words in mind and tried to teach the lesson of a new dispensation. His story tells of the hatred of a man of a past generation who would ruin the happiness of a young couple because his own hope of joy had been crushed just when it was ripe for enjoyment. But a voice came from the past, and appealed to him and not in vain. The sins of the father were not visited upon the children. The young couple came "Smilin' Thru" and none of us doubt that those from the "The Other Side," who were able to see and sympathise with our human frailties, were able to see thru and smile with those who were able to catch and hold the illusive God of Happiness.

"Smilin' Thru" is a finely conceived play which requires every device that a well equipped stage is possessed of. The Olympic has not all these facilities, but we are grateful for what it is able to supply. Last night, I am glad to tell, the house was practically full, and the players well deserved the compliment. They were tackling a big proposition, and they brought it to a successful conclusion. By general consent "Smilin' Thru"" is the best of the Far East Players offerings to date. The actors and actresses are getting well into their stride. They are sensing their audiences. They are conquering the acoustic properties of the house, and they are getting over.

The big work was in the hands of Miss Adele Blood. She had to portray two parts. We saw her in 1870 and we saw her again in 1920. She was clever enough to pervade the house with the atmosphere of both periods. There was one scene where she had to impress upon the audience that she had been shot, and that she was rapidly dying. She had to die. The clever player held her big audience in fine style, and she is to be heartily congratulated upon a histrionic achievement. The playgoers showed their appreciation by tense silence, which was succeeded when the scene was over by loud applause.

"Tim Frawley" was in the cast. He had one of his favorite parts, which calls for sympathy mixed with quiet humor. His "Dr. Owen" is another work of art to "Tim's" picture gallery of successes.

Mr. Herbert Light in the part of "John Carteret" had his first big chance to impress a local audience. He brought a nice presence, a good speaking voice, and a sense of character to his work and was pronounced a success.

There were other characters that call for notice such as Miss Roberts, Bernard Nedell, and Lester Sybe.

"Simlin' Thru"" is really a good play, and the Far East Players give an excellent representation. It will be repeated tonight.

ILLEGALITY OF IRISH COURTS MAY SAVE THEM

King's Confirmation Needed Says Counsel For Condemned Man

(Reuter's Service)

London, Nov. 21.—The Master of the Rolls at Dublin has ordered that no sentence of the Military Court which tried Erskine Childers shall be carried out pending its decision with regard to an application for a writ of habeas corpus in the case of Childers and the eight other men reported to have been sentenced to death for the illegal possession of arms.

Later.—The hearing of the application for a writ of habeas Corpus in Dublin in the case of Erskine Childers has been adjourned until tomorrow. The Master of the Rolls said that a most interesting constitutional question was raised by the contention of Childers' counsel that the resolutions of the Provisional Parliament establishing military courts were illegal without an Act of Parliament confirmed by the King.

Attractive Concert To Be Given Tonight By Paci's Orchestra

Mme. Euphalie Hataleva, the celebrated Russian Concert singer, will be the soloist at the Chamber of Music concert to be given tonight at the Town Hall by members of the Municipal Orchestra. Mme. Hataleva will deliver a group of four Russian songs by Moussorgsky. The first Trepak (Dance of Death) is dramatic in the extreme.

The story runs that the Grim Reaper sends a swirling blizzard in the path of a poor peasant returning home with food for his loved ones. He struggles manfully against the forces of nature, but at last he, too, is forced to join in the wild rigadoon, falls prostrate in the snow and is swiftly covered with a white mantle, while the wind sings a lullaby—of death.

The second selection entitled "Soroka" is a humoresque, recounting the prattle between a gay little gypsy dancer and a magpie which try to outdo each other in singing and dancing.

S'kookloi is a charming cradle song sung by a little girl to her doll. It is filled with childish sympathy and love. The fourth song Hopak, the name of a Russian peasant dance, describes the actions of a woman dancing and jeering at her husband, telling him that she is tired of being a slave in his house, and that it is his turn now to perform the customary wifely duties while she emulates his recent debauches at the neighboring tavern.

Other numbers on tonight's programme include a Sonata in D Major for piano and violin by Volk Andreae. It will be rendered by Maestro Paci at the piano and Mr. A. Foa, violin.

Devorak's String Quartet in F Major given by Messrs Foa, 1st violin, W. Wegman 2nd violin, B. Gershforn, viola, and P. Brunelli, cello, which will conclude the evening's performance.

The Fifth Chamber of Music and Soloists concert will be given on December 7, instead of December 14, on account of the Cambridge local examinations which are to be held in the Town Hall from Dec. 11 to 16.

LLOYD GEORGE ANALYSES VOTE OF ELECTORATE

Urges Government To Keep In Mind The Margin When Shaping Policies

(Reuter's Service)

London, Nov. 22.—In a review of the election results in the Daily Chronicle Mr. Lloyd George calculates that only two-fifths of the electorate voted for the present Administration, while the other three-fifths voted confidence in the other leaders and groups. Mr. Lloyd George urges the Government to remember this in shaping its policies and Parliament immediately to consider a reform of the present system, as a succession of such minority administrations would weaken the authority of the Government in Britain beyond repair. Referring to the followers of Mr. Asquith Mr. Lloyd George significantly remarks that if a sincere desire is manifested to substitute co-operation for conflict he and his colleagues would welcome it.

MACDONALD TO HEAD LABORITES IN THE HOUSE

Declares Finance And Oil Are Moving Factors In Sevres Treaty

(Reuter's Service)

London, Nov. 21.—Mr. Ramsay Macdonald has been elected leader of the Parliamentary Labor Party.

The election of Mr. Ramsay Macdonald as leader of the Parliamentary Labor Party makes him practically the leader of the official opposition in the House of Commons. He is certain to take a strong stand regarding the Near East question now under discussion at Lausanne. And for this reason, it may be interesting to reproduce here today his views on the subject. We quote from an article by him in the first issue of the "New Leader," which is the official organ of Mr. Macdonald's party:

FINANCE AND OIL

Sooner or later the chief influence behind the scenes in the Near East was sure to reveal itself. It is finance and oil. In the Appendix to the Sevres Treaty was the industrial Tripartite Agreement dividing Asia Minor into spheres of economic interest, accompanied by a map upon which economic frontiers were drawn as precisely as though they divided nations. French, Belgian and Italian capital enters into national policy in every question of the Near East. Now, we are told that French and American oil groups in rivalry with British oil groups will throw their shadows on the Venice Conference (since changed to the Lausanne Conference) and whether the words of the negotiations tell of a conflict between Cross and Crescent, between Turk and Greek or Armenian, between a League of Nations and a Constantinople control of the Straits, they must be translated into oil dividends to reveal their true meaning. The Powers behind the throne which helped to wreck Genoa will be behind the throne at Venice. They make revolutions in Athens and are indifferent whether Constantine or Venizelos is their puppet.

BRITAIN'S MORAL AUTHORITY

The role of Great Britain should be very different. It is to seek moral authority by doing the right thing, and if the shilly shallying, the thoughtless compromises, and the ignorant stupidities of our Government have destroyed the foundations upon which that authority must rest, if it be true that Kemal has said that he can trust no promise made by our present Premier (Mr. Lloyd George) the sooner we have spokesmen who are held in respect, and a policy that will bear the test of disinterested justice, the better will it be not only for our honor but for our safety.

The Socialist knows perfectly well that a trade and economic policy must be part of a national policy, but he declines to allow trade and economic interest to hold the world in foe and to subordinate to itself ethical mandates and political wisdom. We must give Turkey its natural boundaries; we must devise ways for securing minorities in peace and liberty not by means that are a daily insult to Turkey, but by means enforced by the League of Nations wherever minorities subject to oppression exist; we must have the Straits free, not that we may dominate them by our Navy, but that tehy may be a world highway kept open by a League of Nations, whose international status is put beyond dispute by the admission of all nations that care to come in; we must make our agreement, not only with Turkey, but with Russia and every people interested in it. It becomes more and more true that a policy of political enlightenment both exalts and enriches a nation.

In other words, we must bury our past errors and begin afresh.

STAY EXECUTION IN CASE AGAINST PASTE COMPANY

A stay of judgment execution for a fortnight was granted by Judge Peter Grain in the British Supreme Court yesterday in a suit for arrears of rent filed against the Hing Wah Paste Company as a result of strenuous efforts made by Mr. M. B. Brown, solicitor for the Paste Company.

The Tu Hsin Realty Company brought an action to recover Tls. 960, being four months' rent for 430-431 Nanking Road, at the rate of Tls. 240 per month.

Mr. Brown, while admitting the claim, asked for a stay of execution on the ground that if judgment were effected immediately it would prejudice the Company and its numerous creditors. The Hing Wah Paste Company creditors had so far all stayed their hands in the hope of a settlement. That settlement was now in sight, and a large sum of money was going to be put into the company. He understood that a million dollars from the United States would be invested in the company and also that the money had actually arrived at Hongkong. If judgment were given it would possibly disturb other creditors of the company, and serve as a spoke in the wheel of the present negotiations. Mr. Brown asked for an order for judgment, the decretal amount to be paid within a fortnight.

Mr. R. Mancel Reece, for the plaintiffs, said the defendants had no answer to the case, as the claim was already admitted. He did not see under what procedure the Judge could do what Mr. Brown had asked him.

Mr. Brown added that it was only a hope and not a certainty to get the million dollars, although he was informed that the money was in Hongkong.

Judge Grain said he had two ways of dealing with the application. One was to give judgment and not send it out, and the other was to give judgment, staying execution. He did not see what harm a judgment would do. It was more or less formality that a judgment was given. If the other creditors were encouraged to file suits by the judgment secured by the present plaintiffs and if the company and the money to pay them, then no harm could be done. If the company did not have the funds and the creditors filed suits, it could not make the position worse.

The Judge inquired whether the defendants were prepared to give the plaintiffs some security to stay execution and was informed that none could be offered.

Mr. Brown took objection to the affidavit not being served.

The Judge, after consultation with the Registrar, ruled that the affidavit was really for the information of the Court and not for the other party.

Mr. Mancel Reece suggested that judgment be entered in favor of the plaintiffs, and he undertook not to press the judgment until a reasonable period had elapsed. The plaintiffs only desired their legal rights guarded, in order that they might enforce them when necessary.

Judgment was given for the full amount, and its execution was ordered to be stayed for a fortnight with liberty to apply.

AMERICAN SCHOOL TO HAVE STRONG ELEVEN OUT

Thanksgiving Game Will Be Test; All In Practise Line

TO CHOOSE TEAM

Coach Watches Work Of Youths To Pick Final Line

BY "TOMMY" GRAFTON

The first practice of the American School "varsity" eleven was held Tuesday afternoon, in preparation for the big game with Shanghai civilians on Thangskiving Day.

Coach Joseph O. Van Hook is in charge of the squad, and will choose the team from the squads that recently staged their series for the school championship. Judging from the pep both teams exhibited in these minor games, he will have excellent material to pick from next week. He is unwilling, as yet, to announce his line-up, but there are several positions which seem certain.

Roy Squires played great football in both games, scoring three touchdowns for Coach Edmunds' team, and is sure to be seen at fullback, where he is expected to show up well in line plunges. McGinnis, whose punts were the feature of the English professor's defense, will probably occupy a half-back position, and his long spirals will look good to S. A. S. when Shanghai crowds the School on her own goal line. Captain Brewster will also be behind the line, possibly at quarterback. The School is unfortunate to lose Wiens, the crack halfback, as he is out of the game with a weak back. He will probably be substituted by Parker.

The line, as yet, is uncertain. Lawton is the pick, and with more experience, he should make a classy tackle. Rawlinson, McDaniel, Hager, Fisher, are all possibilities.

The team will weigh more than was at first expected, and will average around 140 pounds. The backfield is the strong point of the S. A. S. eleven, combining speed with weight, and the line, though slightly weak, should hold its own with a little more practice.

The secretaries of all clubs desiring to compete in the tournament are urged to communicate without delay to Mr. Phillips, telephone 205 (Messrs. The Dog Watch

By Westa

THE opening of the basketball season leads to reflections upon the great popularity that this game has achieved all over the world. Until a few years ago basketball was a distinctive American game, but during the war it was taken to France by American soldiers, and was at once adopted by Europeans, particularly the British, with the result that there is already talk of an international basketball competition, with American, British, French and possibly teams of other nationalities fighting it out each year for the world's championship.

Here in Shanghai the game has taken a firm hold, and has already established itself as the premier winter sport. And as showing the universal appeal of the game it is noteworthy that the majority of those who are now playing it in Shanghai are other than Americans. The British, particularly, are keen for basketball, and are taking it up with ever increasing enthusiasm.

In America basketball has supplanted all other gymnasium sports in popularity, and is played by tens of thousands of boys and young men. Each college has its basketball league, from which the players of the varsity team are selected. Each winter there are intercollegiate contests, with the various entrants striving with might and main to carry off the championship. In every Y.M.C.A. there are teams, to say nothing of the thousands of factory, church and other leagues. It is getting so in America that in the winter time the word "Quint," which is short for basketball team, predominates over all others on the sports pages.

In some of the states the game has become professionalised, much on the order of professional baseball, with salaried managers and players and a scale of admission prices that in some instances would turn an opera impressario green with envy.

SPEAKING of basketball, there never was but one real basketball player. He was a Dutch-American chap named Harry Ostdiek, at one time a catcher on the Cleveland American baseball team when Lajoie was manager, and later manager himself of one of the teams in the Pacific northwest circuit.

This Ostdiek had arms that reached almost to his knees, and hands as big as palm leaf fans. Withal he was six feet tall and as quick as a cat on his feet. He began his basketball career in Iowa, but later went to Chicago, where he joined a professional team that toured the country several times. In seven years this team lost only a half dozen games, and these were contests in which Ostdiek was not in the line-up.

It made not the slightest difference to Ostdiek whether he faced the basket when trying for goals, and he was just as deadly when tossing them backward over his head as when facing his objective. With three men trying to block his throws he could reach out with those gorilla like arms and flick the ball into the basket from his finger tips. He also had a trick, which he acquired by months and months of practice, of leaping high into the air for the ball, catching it in mid air, and tossing it into the basket before coming down, and doing this, as before stated, whether facing the basket or turned away from it. In Chicago, and Dayton, and Cleveland and other cities I have seen banked rows of spectators literally gasp with astonishment when the incomparable Ostdiek pulled this trick. There never was another like him and it is doubtful whether there ever will be.

HARRY was something of a catcher, too, and tricky as a fox. Once, in the old Central league, he was catching for Dayton, and in a game against Terre Haute the Hottentots had three men on with nobody down. Dayton was one run ahead, but it looked shaky for them, as the Dayton pitcher had suddenly developed a streak of wildness. But if it looked bad before it looked worse afterwards when Ostdiek, throwing to catch the runner off second, heaved over his second baseman's head, the ball rolling almost to the center field fence with the Dayton outfielders in frantic pursuit.

But Ostdiek was unruffled by this slip, for he stood calmly at the plate and touched the Hottentot runners out as they came tearing in.

It wasn't the ball he had thrown to centerfield—it was a big Irish potato that he had concealed under his chest protector. And despite the frenzied protests of the Hottentots, he got away with it.

Accidents Will Happen.

It may be impossible to prevent an accident, but it is not impossible to be prepared for it. Chamberlains Pain Balm is not beyond anyone's purse and with a bottle of this liniment you are prepared for most anything.

Long Hit By Billings Recalls Similar Wallop By P. A. Cox In Hongkong 25 Years Ago

The result of the Shanghai cricketers' recent visit is that the Northern port now has a lead over Hongkong in the interport records, having won eleven games to our ten, one being drawn.

The exciting finish to last Saturday's game, when Billings won the match for Shanghai on the last wicket with a mighty drive out of the ground, will long be remembered, says the Hongkong Telegraph in a leading article on November 16.

It recalls another dramatic win, this time by Hongkong, on the same ground, curiously enough just twenty-five years previously almost to the day.

When Hongkong went into bat for the last time, they wanted 201 runs to win, and when the last man faced the bowlers there were still 28 needed to secure victory.

The only member of the Hongkong team who is still in Hongkong was Mr. P. A. Cox, of the Canadian Pacific Steamships, Ltd., former member of the Shanghai Municipal Council and to him fell the distinction of winning the match for this Colony.

He scored the winning stroke and retired unbeaten with a score of 98 to his credit.

What followed is best described in the Telegraph account of the closing scenes: "Then rose such a roar as has not been heard on the cricket ground for many years. Sober, middle-aged men threw their hats and sticks in the air; people shook hands with perfect strangers. . . . . Cox made a dash to get back to the pavilion from the crowd that rushed at him, but one of the Shanghai boys generously 'tackled low' and held him and he had to submit to be carried in on the shoulders of his friends."

That was twenty-five years ago, and, as we say, it bears a close resemblance to what occurred only last Saturday.

Stories of a similar character could probably be told of other encounters between Hongkng and Shanghai in days gone by. These contests leave their memories—memories of a pleasant character and of stirring battles fought out in a sporting spirit.

So today we can congratulate our Shanghai visitors on their victories in the two-day matches, reserving the hope that the time will not be far distant when our own men will be able to go north and again make the interport honors easy.

Shanghai Footballers Out For Victories; St. John's Goes To Soochow

The Shanghai Baptist College football team, which won its first game from Hangchow Christian College in the Intercollegiate football championship series last Saturday by a score of 5 to 0, left for Nanking this morning, to play the University of Nanking on Friday afternoon and the Southeastern University on Saturday. The team is headed by Capt. D. K. King, who is confident that his team will cop both games.

The St. John's eleven will make a trip to Soochow on Saturday morning, and in the afternoon will play the Soochow University in the championship series. Although the St. John's team was defeated in a friendly game last Saturday by The Chinese Recreation Club football team, it is expected to win handily from Soochow.

Honolulu All-Chinese Not Going To Manila For Carnival Baseball

Manila, November 15.—At a meeting held by the Philippine Baseball League it was decided to drop all negotiations with the Honolulu All Chinese baseball team for a series of games here during the Carnival week. The step was influenced by the fact that major league stars from the States are coming here next month which will incur many expenses to the league.

Negotiations will be opened to bring a baseball team from Japan for the carnival series. It will be of more interest to the local fans as it will give them an idea of the class of baseball the Olympic team will be up against in the next Far Eastern games at Osaka as many of those who will come will be selected to represent that country in the Olympic championship. They will be brought over in conjunction with the P. A. A. F.

Several baseball teams have already sent their written application to the directors for the coming league. Among these are Cavite Navy Yard, Post of Manila, Camp Nichols, Huron, Manila Cits and McKinley. Three pitchers, Sammy Fraser, Green and Carmichael have applied for registration as spit ball pitchers. The first two were already recorded as such.

In connection with the baseball series for the big leaguers, a committee composed of Walter Z. Smith, Sergeant Tucker and Toby has been appointed to take charge of the grounds for the games.

U. S. Court For China

Judgment for $7,631 Tientsin currency and costs was given Li Heng-chiu against Mr. Oscar Wagman in a decision handed down in the United States Court for China by Judge Charles S. Lobingier just before his departure for Peking.

Mr. Richard T. Evars and Mr. Isador A. Landesman appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Theodore E. Emmand for the defendant. Judge Lobingier's judgment in full is as follows:

1—Pleading: The rule applied that in the absence of a reply, new matter in the answer will be deemed denied.

2—Sales: Warranty. There is ordinarily no implied warranty of quality in sales.

3.—Id.: Evidence examined and found insufficient to show express warranty, actionable breach, or loss.

Lobingier, J.:

This is an action to recover on an account admitted by defendant to be due from him to plaintiff. The account shows a balance of Mex. $9,631.00, but the complaint, which is substantially all admitted, alleges a payment of Mex. $2,000.00.

Defendant, however, after admitting substantially all the averments of the complaint, pleads a set-off alleged to arise from losses incurred by him in the sale of goods purchased from the plaintiff and due as he claims to defects in the quality "which plaintiff warranted and guaranteed to defendant would be fully up to the sample submitted and to the lengths desired." (par. 6). We find no reply, but under the rule (1) prevailing in this Court new matter in the answer will be treated as denied even in the absence of a reply.

The burden rests upon defendant to prove his set-off and this requires, in the case at bar, that he show by a preponderance of the evidence (1) that he did purchase the goods in question from plaintiff, (2) the warranty, (3) its breach and (4) the losses therefrom.

1.—Plaintiff denies that he was the vendor of these goods and testifies that he was merely a broker, selling them to defendant on 3 percent commission. In this he is corroborated by the account (Ex. 1), whose correctness defendant admits and which contains the commission item, and by the witnesses Fei Hsing-hsun and Max Herskovitz, both of whom state that he acted as commission man or broker. The former testifies that the contract was between defendant and E. Jee and Co., was in writing, that the witness saw it signed and that defendant received a copy. This testimony is not denied by defendant. Indeed he speaks of the "packing particulars" indicating that at least some features of the contract were in writing. But no document is produced nor is its absence accounted for. The alleged "purchase by defendant from plaintiff" has no support except the former's own testimony and the preponderance is clearly against him.

2.—But if plaintiff were the vendor he would not thereby have assumed any implied liability for the quality of these goods.

"In the absence of fraud on a sale of goods without warranty or particular agreement as to quality, the seller is not answerable for defects, whether obvious or latent, the rule of caveat emptor applying in all its force." (2)

Nor, if he was a broker, was there any implied guaranty on his part of equality and genuineness. (3) Was there, then, an express warranty of quality? Defendant's testimony on this point was as follows:

"At the end of 1920 I purchased about 200 piculs of horse hair from Li Heng-chiu as these goods were ready for shipment sometime in the spring of 1921. I was unable to go to Mukden to examine them. But before I started into ship the goods he (plaintiff) brought me a sample and guaranteed the goods would be up to sample."

Apparently defendant means to say that plaintiff gave this 'guaranty' after the contract of purchase had been made and partly performed and that the 'guaranty' was therefore independent of said contract. If so, it required a new and separate consideration. (4) which is not shown.

3.—But if such a 'guaranty' had been given the burden would still rest upon defendant to prove its breach. He claims to have seen some 50 of the 210 cases when delivered and declares that they were "not up to sample." When pressed for particulars he stated that "the quality was supposed to be pure tail hair and they contained manes." He does not, however, testify that plaintiff expressly undertook or guaranteed to furnish only tail hair but merely that they were "supposed to be" such. Proof of a breach of warranty should be more explicit than that.

Defendant also speaks of the "packing particulars" not being complied with as to length, colors etc., but he does not claim that these formed part of the alleged "guaranty." Indeed the undisputed evidence is that they were not prepared by plaintiff himself.

Defendant claims not to have discovered these defects until the goods were unpacked at Philadelphia in August, 1921. Yet it was not until six months later that he notified (plaintiff Ex. A) of the alleged defects. Moreover it appears from evidence offered by himself that defendant did know of defects [illegible] before August for he introduces (and thereby confirms) a letter dated June 19, 1921, [illegible] a third party reading

"I was surprised to hear from Li Heng Chiu that you think the horse hair is not quite up to sample, let me hear more about that matter from you." (Ex. F)

And notwithstanding such knowledge, defendant received plaintiff's statement of account (Ex. 1) dated two days later, which defendant says is correct and he does not claim to have made any objection because of the defects. We cannot regard the evidence as sufficient to show a breach of warranty.

4.—Even were the breach proved there is hardly competent evidence of resulting loss upon which to base a judgment. Defendant offers only two of his own letters, which are clearly self-serving and inadmissible, and a statement from his brother purporting to be an affidavit but not constituting competent evidence. On the other hand, defendant introduces a letter (Ex. K), appearing to have been written to defendant's brother by the purchaser of the goods which not only contains no complaint but indicates a desire to purchase more.

On the whole, we are unable to find that defendant has proved his set-off by a preponderance of the evidence, and as the original account is undisputed we find that there is due plaintiff from defendant the sum of Mexican $7,631, Tientsin currency, for which amount together with his costs judgment is accordingly rendered in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendant.

By the Court,
Charles S. Lobingier
Judge.

Foreigners Come To Aid Of Jepoardised Official With Statement

(China Press Service)

Peking, Nov. 21.—President Li Yuan-hung has had a mandate drafted explaining the circumstances leading to the arrest of Mr. Lo Wen-kan, Minister of Finance. He was unable to have the mandate sealed on account of the intervention of certain parties who, it is reported, every mandate before its promulgation

Mr. Lo Wen-kan still adheres to his decision to remain in the lock-up until the case against him is tried with Wu Ching-lien and Chang Po-lieh as prosecutors.

President Li now admits that he was not kept ignorant of the negotiations leading to the revision of the Austrian loan. He says that he has some recollection that Mr. Lo Wen-kan reported the negotiations verbally to him.

WILL AID MINISTER

A British firm here and the Sino-Italian Bank have expressed their willingness to appear at the trial as witnesses to show that the commissions of £30,000 and £5,000 respectively were the earnings of their respective concerns for handling the transaction and had nothing to do with the Ministry of Finance. Premier Wang Chung-hui has given instructions to the Cabinet Secretariat that no further work be done until the case against Mr. Lo Wen-kan has been settled. After the case has been dealt with, the Cabinet will resign en bloc.

In the meantime the Tientsin party, which is working for the predominance of Tsao Kun in the political field, is endeavoring to make Kao Ling-wei the head of the next Cabinet. President Li Yuan-hung is reported to have ordered a special railway car to take him back to Tientsin but his subordinates held the order up.

ANHUI TROOPS DISARMED BY NANKING MEN

Suchowfu Wakes To Find Martial Law; Soldiers Work Rapidly

(China Press Correspondence)

Suchowfu, Nov. 17.—This city awoke this morning to find itself under martial law. During the night Nanking soldiers were posted throughout the city and suburbs in large numbers. They wore white badges on their arms.

All the city gates were closed and machine guns posted upon them. At daybreak the various camps of Anhui soldiers were surrounded, and the men commanded to lay down their arms. Great excitement prevailed for their surprise was complete.

Not a shot was fired however and soon the ammunition and guns were in safe keeping. Each private was paid $30 and the officers received from $50 to $1,000 each. The troops were ordered to go home. The same method of procedure was followed in the country where the Anhui men were stationed.

It would seem that approximately 2,000 troops were thus disarmed and disbanded, though it is difficult to verify the figures. Special troops arrived from Nanking to aid in carrying out this coupe. General Chen is being praised for the effective and peaceable way in which the affair was carried out.

These Anhui soldiers have always had a bad reputation in the city. A few hundred of them have been quartered here for the past two years. The populace always distinguishes them from the Nanking men, to the credit of the latter. The kidnapping of wealthy people and other gentlemanly forms of looting which occur frequently within the city and its suburbs, is usually attributed rightly or wrongly, to the Anhui men.

FRANCE PLANS HUGE ELECTRIC POWER PLANTS

Expect Four Million Horse Power From Works On Rhine And Rhone

(French Wireless through Reuter)

Paris, Nov. 21.—The Chamber of Deputies today began the debate on the Budget for Public Works. The Minister, M. le Trocquer, outlined a program, including particularly the hydraulic work on the Rhone and Rhine. He declared that in ten years the total power obtained would be 4,000,000 H. P.

Referring to the canal works undertaken in Germany, the Minister emphasised that Germany could as well pay her workers and engineers to carry out similar works in France under the head of reparations without increasing the inflation of currency.

HARDING TO RUN AGAIN IN 1924; FRIENDS ASSERT

(China Press Service)

Washington, Nov. 26.—President Harding will be a candidate to succeed himself in 1924, according to persons in the confidence of the White House today. The President has given out nothing to the public on the subject, but some of his intimates have voiced it as their opinion that he undoubtedly would make the race again.

Recent stories that the President would be a one-term Executive and that he intended to retire at the end of the four years, based in part on the fact that he has purchased the old Harding homestead in Ohio, are the immediate occasion for the talk concerning 1924.

The "Washington Post," which frequently reflects the views of the Administration and is owned and edited by E. B. McLean, one of Mr. Harding's most intimate friends, has come out with statements refuting the idea of retirement at the end of four years and predicting that the President would be renominated and re-elected in 1924.

Moreover, the Republican Congressional Committee, in a recent appeal for funds, indicated that it was the belief of members of the committee that the President would run again and that the party should insist upon his making the race.

Though there have been reports from time to time that Mr. Harding was not enamored of the task of being President it is a fact that the prevailing view here is that he will once more be a candidate.

Furthermore, it is said that his political friends are not going to wait for the coming of 1924, but that they will make a strong drive during this winter to get things shaped up in a large number of important states in order that Harding men will compose a majority of the delegates to the 1924 convention. Though this cannot be done in some of the states having Presidential primaries there is no doubt that much effective work can be accomplished in the way of advance organisation.

It is not generally realised that the beginning of the next Presidential campaign is only about twelve months away. Under the Presidential primary law of South Dakota the holding of the local causcuses looking toward a state expression on choice for the Presidential nomination will begin next fall.

METHODISTS TO BE UNITED TILL 1924 CONFERENCE

West China Conference Has Decided Not To Divide For Another Year

(China Press Correspondence)

Chengtu, Nov. 6, (by mail).—There will be no division of the West China Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church before the year 1924 or 1925. This was decided upon at the eighth annual session of the conference, which closed its deliberations here yesterday after a strenuous week. Bishop Frederick T. Keeney of Foochow, Fukien presided.

Several reasons were advanced as to why it was decided not to divide. Probably the chief reason was declared to be the acknowledged lack of a sufficiently strong Chinese leadership. The West China Conference is one of the youngest in China and because of its isolation practically all of its members are natives of Szechuen. Most of these are only first or second generation Christians.

A second reason is the present stringency in the financial situation of the church in America. It was felt that to divide the conference at this time would place an added burden on the present heavy running expenses of the church.

Favorable action was taken in regard to the establishment of a women's college in connection with the West China Union University here. It was voted to refer the matter to the general board in America and request that definite steps toward organisation be taken as early as possible.

Tzechow was selected to entertain the next session of the annual conference, which is to be held in June, 1923. Bishop L. J. Birney of Shanghai will preside.

BANK FRAUD CHARGED

A charge of defrauding the American-Oriental Banking Corporation of $3,500 was brought against two Chinese clerks who appeared before Assessor Blackburn and Magistrate Yui at the Mixed Court yesterday.

Detective Inspector Reeves stated that the fraud had been discovered Saturday noon and investigation of the bank's books for the entire year was now being conducted. Mr. W. S. Fleming appeared to prosecute and Mr. N. E. Lurton represented the defendants. The case was remanded to come before the American Assessor next Tuesday, accused being held without bail.

Tsingtao Hotel Man Is Visitor Here

Mr. Timothy Herlihy, general manager of the Grand and Strand Hotels and Grand Hotel Annex in Tsingtao, is a visitor in Shanghai, arriving here yesterday from Hankow. Mr. Herlihy has been on an extended tour of North China, going to Peking from Tsingtao and making the trip from Peking to Hankow on the first train to get through after bandits had torn up the rail. He came by boat from Tsingtao. Mr. Herlihy is stopping at the Carlton, and will leave for Tsingtao next Tuesday.

Coffin And Hearse, But No Corpse Ready

Paris, Sept. 9.—A series of hoaxes in the Rennes region has been exposed by the police arresting Anne Marie Snaudeau, 21 years old. Announcing the death of a certain person, the girl ordered coffin, religious service and hearse, as well as a large quantity of flowers.

Having made all these arrangements for a funeral she changed her plan and proceeded to order fourteen carriages for an imaginary wedding, making reservations for an elaborate luncheon for twenty-five guests at one of the biggest hotels. The repast was prepared and the carriages waited at the given address, but neither bride nor bridegroom materialised.

The girl will be restored to her parents on condition that stringent control is to be exercised over her actions.

Maxim's Opens

Maxim's Cafe and Palais de Danse is open!

Shortly after 7 o'clock yesterday evening the crowd began streaming into this latest addition to the city's amusement and shortly thereafter it was crowded to capacity and crowds were turned away.

Mr. W. A. Stewart, the manager, stated that more than 600 were served at dinner and according to his unbiased testimony there was not one dissatisfied customer.

Following a dinner exquisitely served from hors d'ouvres to liqueurs, the grand ball room was opened at 9:30 o'clock and soon thereafter it was filled to capacity.

Jack Morris' syncopated octet composed of Guy Gillen, banjo, J. Bigano, violin, Ralph Gillen, saxophone, George Mugge, cornet, Benton Wolfe, trombone, Ted Sanborn and Jake Benton, drums, with Jack Morris at piano.

More than a thousand of Shanghai's elite attended the opening of Maxim's which was successful in every respect.

Capt. Dollar Looks To Pacific; Tells Of Increased Trade With Far Eastern Ports

Dean Of American Shipping Men Describes Commercial Advancement Of Orient To China Club Of Seattle

Within the lifetime of the younger generation of shipping men the center of world commerce will swing from the Atlantic Ocean to the Pacific, Capt. Robert Dollar of San Francisco, dean of Pacific Coast shipping men, declared in an address at the meeting of the China Club at the New Washington Hotel, says the Seattle Times of recent date.

"Perhaps I will not live to see this change," said Captain Dollar, who is 78 years old, "but you young men will see it and we should all of us be up and doing in order to take advantage of it."

Stating that he would base his talk on "hard knocks of personal experience in trade with China," Captain Dollar reviewed the work of years in the development of commerce with the Orient, summarising his knowledge in the declaration that "persistency will be rewarded by success."

In explaining the tremendous growth of trade with China, the speaker cited the increase in the population of Shanghai from 600,000 twenty-five years ago to 1,800,000 today.

"The surface has barely been scratched," he asserted. "But we commercial men must follow in the wake of evangelists, and there is much evangelical work to be done before extensive development of our trade with China can be carried out." Captain Dollar told of several instances in which his own company aided in carrying on this missionary work.

In his company's efforts to develop trade with China, two ships were sent 1,500 miles inland on the Yangtsze River to a district rarely visited by white men. One of the ships was seized and held until $65,000 ransom was paid the general in command of troops in that area.

Continual civil warfare hampers trade development considerably, he said, describing China's present military system as "the curse of the country." "But with all the fighting business goes on just the same," he added.

WAR WITH JAPAN AVERTED

In touching on commercial relation with Japan, Captain Dollar declared that the four-power treaty alone averted war between Japan and the United States. "We would have been at war with Japan months ago, and nothing could have prevented it, had not the four-power treaty been adopted," he asserted.

Referring to the immigration investigation conducted by the China Club, on which a report was made at a recent luncheon, Captain Dollar said similar immigration difficulties had been encountered in San Francisco, citing an instance in which a $500,000 expenditure for a blast furnace in Pittsburg was diverted to England because of unjust treatment of the Chinese purchasing agent by immigration officials in San Francisco.

Captain Dollar told of an amusing incident that occurred as a result of his foreign trade activities while William Jennings Bryan was secretary of state.

BRYAN INCIDENT CITED

"I had some trouble about one of my ships in Rio de Janeiro," Captain Dollar said. "'Dollar,' Mr. Bryan told me, 'if you want to keep out of trouble stay at home.'

"'Mr. Bryan,' I answered 'I'm in foreign trade to stay.' And I'm still in business, but Mr. Bryan is out of office.

"That is the kind of thing we are up against in development of foreign trade. We never have had the proper co-operation from government officials, and I don't suppose we ever will get it, but if we go ahead in our own way we'll win out in the end."

Commenting editorially on Capt. Dollar's address, the Seattle paper says:

"Capt. Robert Dollar told a Seattle audience that within the lifetime of the younger generation in this city, the center of world commerce would swing from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

"Some who heard him probably doubted. Century after century, world trade has centered on the Atlantic. They probably felt it would be impossible to direct it elsewhere.

"But the ancient Tyrians Phoenicians and Romans felt the same way about the Mediterranean. The Central Sea was the great trading machine of the known world for a much longer period than the Atlantic has been. But when Phoenicia fell, when Rome crumbled, when Venice decayed—most of all, when Columbus discovered the New World and daring voyagers opened up a new route to India around the southern extremity of Africa, the Mediterranean became a mere Euro-Africa lake and the commerce of nations was transferred to the Atlantic.

"At the present moment, the only American trade that is growing is that with countries across the Pacific. Europe is buying less and seeking to sell more; Asia is prepared to swap dollar for dollar—to buy as greatly as it sells. In fact, with its raw materials in demand elsewhere, it may be prepared to purchase a greater amount in the United States than it ships to this country if American factors will go after the business.

"The war's results have not yet been visualised or wholly experienced by Europe. Ten years hence, statesmen and others may realise that such matters as German reparations and the fate of the Turks and Greeks in a little corner of the continent adjacent to Constantinople, while considered of prime importance in 1922, really were only small chips floating on a sea of events vastly more important to the future of every nation from the Arctic Ocean to the Mediterranean."

November 22, 1922

Spot bar silver was up ⅛d. and forward 3-16d. in London yesterday. The New York price advanced to 65 cents and the London-New York cross rate declined to 449.

The only changes in our quotations here today were a drop in the Gold Dollar rate to 70½ and a rise in the Franc rate to 995.

Our market opened firm this morning and became strong later on in the day, business at one time being as high as 3-2¼ in Sterling and in Gold Dollars at 72½ November, 72⅝ December and 72¾ for forward delivery.

Just before the close however, speculators who heretofore had been strong sellers became buyers and rates quickly eased off until at the close when there were no sellers of Sterling at better than 3-2⅝ for any delivery and of Gold Dollars at 72⅛ for November-December and 72⅝ for forward.

The market however was steady at this level. There were sellers of Yen at the close at 67¼ for November-December delivery and buyers at 67⅛.

There were sellers of Franc T. T. today at 1010 and buyers at 1020. Banks were quoting 3-3¼ for Sterling bills, 74 for Gold Dollar bills and 1050 for Franc bills.

China and India bought a small amount of silver in London yesterday and the market is reported steady. New York report their market as dull with nothing doing.

Japan Gains In China Trade; British Traders Would Use Boxer Funds For Students

BY THE FINANCIAL EDITOR

At the first annual luncheon of the Sino-British Trade Association in London considerable emphasis was laid by several of the speakers on the necessity of British traders sending their own representatives to ascertain the needs of the various markets.

American traders have long recognised this important fact. China, so far as trade development is concerned, is as yet only barely scratched. Americans have all along endeavored to retain the share of China's trade which they increased enormously during the war. Their experiments are now being watched with considerable interest by British merchants.

At the luncheon referred to, Sir Walter de Freece spoke in support of the idea of bringing intelligent Chinese to England as trade observers, and even advocated the diversion of the proceeds of the Boxer Indemnity for the purpose, as he maintained that when these Chinese returned to China they would constitute England's most valuable means of business advertisement in this country.

These views have been aired before at the meetings of the British Chamber of Commerce and the agitation is gathering more force, and British traders are beginning to realise that better methods are required to develop the trade between China and Great Britain.

More and more interest in China is being evinced in the United States, and although the past two years development of Sino-American trade has received a slight setback, close observers are convinced that this is only a period of pause and that it will go up with rapid strides. The lessons of the war and the hectic period which followed have been profitable to the American commercial community to such an extent that sweeping criticism of American deficiency in packing, credit policies, etc., is no longer warranted.

It is now, as never before, very generally realised by the American houses in Shanghai and other parts of China and in the Orient in general that Chinese trade is a matter of calm, scientific calculation, rather than haphazard, optimistic gambling. This growing scientific and professional conception of trade in China is being emphasised now. America's overseas markets are gradually shifting from Europe to Asia, for the relative importance of markets outside Europe is increasing. The most significant progress may be looked for in the China market.

In this connection it may be remarked that Japan's trade with China is now beginning to pick up, for last month her exports to China witnessed a fair expansion, having registered a gain of more than a million Yen over October of last year. The value of Japan's exports to China was Yen 26,941,000 against Yen 25,305,000 for the same month last year. Exports from China to Japan last month totalled Yen 11,604,000 against Yen 12,518,000 for the same month last year, a drop of Yen 914,000.

We are told that business is now better the world over and is steadily on the upgrade with few exceptions. In the Far East conditions are better than they have ever been since 1920. Business in China is slightly better, but China's recovery will be aided as the foreign demand for her products improve and and the strain on Chinese purchasing pawn is relaxed.

Japan is making an effort to pull herself out of the slough of economic depression. The general commercial situation is not unsatisfactory, but the gain in buying power has not been anything like sensational or even normal, and the effort of most people to act cautiously about future commitments is still prevalent. The great falling-off since the "before the war" period is still unbridged.

Cotton Market Seriously Alarmed Over Supplies

(Reuter's Service)

New York, October 27.—That the cotton market is becoming very seriously alarmed over the question of supplies this season, and, for that matter, next season as well, has been clearly demonstrated by the enormous buying of spinners the past week. This demand has been forced to compete with strong public speculative buying, and the combined accumulation advanced prices to practically 24½ cent for December contracts.

Many predictions are made, and by some of the houses standing high in the business community, that cotton will this season go to 30 cents a pound. Such a figure undoubtedly would tend to restrict consumption; at the present level of prices, however, cotton is considered a safe investment. Mills are experiencing one of the greatest buying movements of their product for years, and where the manufacture is covered with raw cotton, the business shows a satisfactory profit on the basis of the present range of values.

The situation as regards spot cotton seems to be developing increasing strength daily. Southern hedge selling in the futures market has dwindled materially during the past fortnight. The producer has sold a large proportion, has paid his debts, and is prepared to hold the remainder of his crop until in his judgment the price return is satisfactory.

SPOT COTTON UP

Recently, spot cotton in the South has advanced more rapidly than have contracts on the Cotton Exchanges and it is declared impossible now to ship cotton in any quantity to New York and deliver it on contract except at a loss. Insistent demand from both exporters and domestic mills has forced up the basis, particularly on cotton having any staple.

An interesting feature of the spot situation, and one of the signs of the times, is the establishment of branch offices in the Western belt by Carolina cotton merchants in order to meet the demand for cotton from Carolina mills, the cotton in their home territory having already been sold, or held off the market by the Co-operative Associations. The latter, in the cotton belt as a whole, are estimated to have under their control close to 2,500,000 bales, which will be marketed gradually on advances.

It is significant that the recent substantial advance has failed to bring out an increase of offerings. On the contrary, cotton is reported harder to buy. European political conditions undoubtedly have exerted some restrictive effect on the demand for cotton; were it not for this influence, many believe that the price of cotton would be higher today. Demand from abroad now seems to be increasing, particularly from British spinners, whose stocks are stated to be smallest on record.

SHIP TO GERMANY

American houses are shipping considerable quantities of cotton to Germany and other Continental countries on consignment. It is figured by a prominent New Orleans firm that American mills will need about 6,600,000 bale of this year's short crop, leaving only about 3,400,000 bales for shipment abroad, or only about 50 percent of foreign requirements, since foreign mills last season consumed 6,570,000 bales of American cotton.

This house points out that next year, in all likelihood, the need for larger cotton crops in all cotton producing countries, especially in the United States, will be more apparent than at any time since the American Civil War of 60 years ago, as the world's carryover of all kinds, particularly of American, will likely be reduced to almost the point of exhaustion, the indicated carryover of American alone pointing to only about 3,000,000 bales at the end of July, against 4,904,000 at the close of July 1922, and 9,364,000 at the end of July 1921.

Another authority expresses the opinion that before the new crop 1923 cotton can reach the mills, say by October 1, 1923, the reserve of unspun American cotton will be down to half a million bales. Weather considerations are no longer a market factor. In small sections of the more Northerly districts of the belt, killing frosts have occurred; but it is quite generally believed that the size of the present yield cannot be affected by climatic conditions.

The Bonus And Prohibition

WHEN Congress reconvened for the special session scheduled to consider only the proposed Ship Subsidy, Congressman John P. Hill, Republican, of Maryland, started what may turn out to be one of the most nercely fought issues in Congress by introducing a bill proposing that American veterans of the world war should be paid a bonus from taxation of beer and cider containing not more than 2¾ percent alcohol.

Under ordinary circumstances Congressman Hill's wording of his bill would be innocent enough, but it so happens that at the present time there is a statute known as the Volstead Act which prohibits beer and cider, or any other liquor, containing that much alcohol. Consequently, to raise money to pay such a bonus additional legislation would become necessary, which would annul the Volstead Act as it now stands and allow light beer and semi-hard cider to be purveyed.

Congressman Hill, by coupling up the two issues, will win the support of veterans desirous of a bonus and also the votes of the "wets" for the Bonus rider. On the other hand, there are many who went through the world war who are not in favor of a bonus and many others who favor the Volstead Act.

Predictions in American politics are often worthless but in this case it may be predicted that Congressman Hill's bill will be assigned to the limbo of waste-basket legislation. But not until after a good, stiff fight.

Iowa's New Senator

ONE of the most curious results of the elections just held in the United States was the election to the United States Senate from Iowa of Col. Smith W. Brookhart, Bull Mooser, radical, parlor Socialist, and bitter anti-Harding man with a Republican label. Col. Brookhart won the Republican primaries despite the fact that President Harding and Senator Cummins, the two idols of Iowa Republicanism, came out squarely against him, and defeated the Democratic candidate, Mr. Clyde Herring, an immeasurably better legislator, chiefly because he had a Republican label attached to his coat-tails—and Iowa is as certain of going Republican as it is of raising a record crop of corn next year.

Brookhart received the normal Republican vote, corralled all the Socialist and near-Radical votes, captured the votes of most of the railroad men of the state because of his opposition to the Cummins law, and the rest of the labor vote on general principals—and simply walked away with the election.

When he gets to Washington he probably will lose many of his pre-election radical tendencies and be found lined up with La Follette of Wisconsin, Norbeck of North Dakota, Ladd of South Dakota, Borah of Idaho, Norriss of Nebraska and the other insurgents on most issues. Unless he advances far from where he is now, however, close political observers say he will never be the leader Senator Cummins was in his prime. He will have just two years in which to show his worth as he is elected to fill the unexpired term of Senator Kenyon, who resigned to accept a Federal judgeship, so he may be expected to work fast. There will be fireworks when Col. Brookhart reaches Washington—and there will be many interested in seeing whether it turns out honest-to-heck ammunition, or merely a dud.

Correspondence

INTERNATIONAL COURTESY

Dear Sir: I have read with interest Mr. Chen's letter on "International Courtesy" in your today's issue. I am always struck with the courtesy of both the Japanese and Chinese in offering seats to foreigners. I travel a great deal by tram and practically never have to stand and have a seat given me by Chinese as often as by foreigners.

I am neither young nor very old nor physically disabled so can lay no special claim to this attention.

I heartily agree with Mr. Chen's statement, that courtesy should be international, not racial. Shanghai is the place to learn that while one's own nation may be superior in one's own estimation it may not be so in that of others and that every individual is entitled to common courtesy whether Oriental or Westerner.

Enclosing my card, I am. Yours truly,

"FOREIGNER."

Three Church Reformers—By E. P. Graham-Barrow

(Note: This lecture was delivered by Mr. E. P. Graham Barrow to the Church of England Men's Society at Church House, Shanghai, on Monday, November 20, 1922.)

Erasmus has been blamed for not supporting the reformer Luther. It has been pointed out that both aimed at reforms in the church. But the difference between the two lay here—

Erasmus believed that reforms could be brought about gradually, peacefully, by the spread of education, without destroying the unity of the Church and plunging Europe into centuries of fratricidal war. Luther, on the contrary, was a violent revolutionist, prepared to break with the past, ready to sacrifice unity and brotherhood for what he believed to be the victory of truth. I do not contend that Luther was wrong and Erasmus right. Certainly we have paid a heavy price for the Freedom which the Reformation gave; but it may have been inevitable. It may well have been that the Church was too corrupt to be cleansed by the moderate and peaceful methods of the Oxford Reformers. The dream of Erasmus of a broad, comprehensive, tolerant Catholic Church, whose enforced dogmas should be few, whose theology should be simple, whose prelates should be servants of the people, whose dignitaries should imitate the poverty, humility, the self-sacrifice of Christ, whose ministers should be the first to raise their voices on behalf of the poor and oppressed, whose aim should be to put an end to war and tyranny and needless suffering and to inaugurate the Kingdom of God upon earth—this no doubt was too noble an ideal for the sixteenth century to attain to, nor has the nineteenth realised it. But for all that, the life of Erasmus, though it went out in pain and anguish and gloom, amid the crash and storm of the Reformation conflict, was not a failure. The world would not listen to him then. It is listening now.

If "The Praise of Folly" was a satire then More's "Utopia" must be termed "an ideal." In this book we are brought face to face with the fact that for four centuries we have been slowly, surely, approaching More's ideal and converting his dreams into accomplished facts.

We pride ourselves today—do we not?—a good deal on our enlightened measures to prevent increase of crime by good government and education. That idea is first found in More's "Utopia." He denounces the system of pure suppression and brutal punishment. "If," he says, "you suffer your people to be ill educated, and their manners to be corrupted from their infancy, and then punish them for these crimes to which their first education disposed them, what else is to be concluded from this, but that you first make thieves and then punish them?"

Again, it has been one of the great social reformations of the nineteenth century that through the efforts of Sir Samuel Romilly, Sir James Mackintosh, and their co-workers, the barbarous criminal code, which punished nearly two hundred offences with death, has been abolished. It was not Sir Samuel Romilly, however, but Sir Thomas More, three centuries ahead of his time, who first urged with passionate earnestness the plea that no man should be put to death for theft and other venial offences. "If, by the Mosaical law," argued More, "though it was rough and severe as being laid upon a people obstinate and servile, men were only fined and not put to death for theft, we cannot imagine that in the new law of mercy, God has given us a greater license to cruelty than he did to the Jews. It is plain and obvious, that it is absurd and of ill consequence to the commonwealth, that a thief and a murderer should be equally punished. Extreme justice is extreme injury."

Again, if there is one blessing more than another which we prize in this age, it is the privilege of every man to hold what religious belief seems best to himself, without persecution, without let or hindrance from any one. I do not say that the old bad spirit of persecution for religious opinions is entirely extinct, but at any rate it is ashamed of itself, and the power of imposing penalties upon one's neighbor for his differences of religious creed is rapidly disappearing. Now the very idea of toleration in religion, that great, prominent feature of modern life, was first given to England by Sir Thomas More. He is as much the original discoverer of it as Columbus was of the islands of America, or Sir Isaac Newton of the doctrine of Gravitation. "The founder of Utopia," he tells us, "made a law that every man might be of what religion he pleased, and might endeavor to draw others to it by the force of argument and by amicable and modest ways, but without the terness against those of other opinion." The history of toleration is but a commentary on these words of More's, and it may be doubted whether we have yet sufficiently honored the noble genius and nobler heart of the man who, three hundred and seventy years ago, with the mental mists and darkness of the Middle Ages still about him, gave utterance to such a thought.

"In Utopia," he writes gravely, "all the priests are men of eminent piety; therefore their number is few." There was a foolish rage in England in Henry's reign for jewels and precious stones for use in dress. "In Utopia," says More contemptuously, "they find pearls on their coast, diamonds and carbuncles on their rocks; with these they adorn their children, who are delighted with them and glory in them during their childhood; but when they grow to years and see that none but children use such baubles, they, of their own accord, lay them aside, and would be as much ashamed to use them afterwards as children among us, when they come to years, are of their puppets and other toys." Gold and silver, too, were despised in Utopia as metals of little use, and, very significantly, were used to make fetters for slaves. Apparently, More had a poor opinion of the English field sports of his time, for he remarks that "among the Utopians all this business of hunting is turned over to their butchers; and they look upon hunting as one of the basest parts of a butcher's work."

Occasionally, More's satire is delightfully delicate, as when he tells us that in his imaginary state, no leagues or treaties, or alliances are ever made with other nations, the Utopians having no belief in them. He then observes with a quiet chuckle "Perhaps they would change their mind if they lived amongst us." He lived in an age of abominable and lying diplomacy, when neither King, nor Emperor, nor Pope could be trusted to keep his word a day longer than it profited him. This is More's way of striking a blow at the prevailing Machiavellianism of the time. "We know," he says ironically, "how religious treaties are observed in Europe, more particularly where the Christian doctrine is received, which is partly owing to the justice and goodness of the princes themselves, and partly to the reverence they pay to the Popes, who, as they are most religious observers of their own promises, so they exhort all other princes to perform theirs."—all of which was, as we know, the exact contrary of the actual fact.

It is in this noble book of his, this "Utopia," deserving, if ever a volume did, John Milton's description of a good book, "the precious life-blood of a master spirit, embalmed and treasured up to a life beyond life," which constitutes in this age More's chief claim to our regard.

We live in a time when humanity is throbbing with new ideas and new aspirations, when especially one fresh hope animates the world, that in the near future the hard lot of the suffering, patient millions who bear the burden of the earth's toil shall be ameliorated. We are not worthy to live in our generation—I dare to say it—if we have no share in this hope.

This hope—in its essence being social reform.

That does not mean that it need create apprehension in the minds of any one. We are no revolutionists. We have no party politics to propagate. There are no valued institutions which we wish to assail.

Our Church gives allegiance to no Socialism except to the Socialism of Jesus Christ. We do not believe that Christianity is an exploded myth. Our methods in their degree are the methods of the Oxford Reformers—of Cole and Erasmus and More. What we care about mainly is that the best gifts of God shall be scattered broadcast amongst the people: that culture and knowledge and exalted ideals shall spread from the few to the many; that "no man shall die ignorant to whom God has given the capacity for knowledge:" that the great cities shall not long continue the scandal and the shame alike of our Religion and our Humanity.

'Oh! why, and for what, are we waiting while our brothers
droop and die,
And on every wind of the heavens
a wasted life goes by?
How long shall they reproach us,
where crowd on crowd they dwell,
Poor ghosts of the wicked city,
the gold-crushed hungry hell!

They are gone! There is none can undo it, nor save our souls
from the curse;
But many a million cometh, and shall they be better or worse?"

The Changing East

By Isaac F. Marcosson

This is the third installment of articles on Shanghai from the typewritter of the famous journalist appearing in The Saturday Eevning Post.

In the following lucid account of things Shanghai Mr. Marcosson writes of the silk trade, eggs, hairnets and other exports, the cart-wheel dollar, German trade, the question of railway development, and problems of food control.

The cotton industry represents only one phase of Chinese industrial development. There has been a conspicuous growth in flour manufacture. The forty mills of 1913 have expanded to one hundred and three, including those of Manchuria, at the present time. In Shanghai and vicinity there are thirty modern flour plants.

The Great War speeded up Chinese flour milling. China raises about 200,000,000 bushels of wheat a year, which is ordinarily about one quarter the American production. In connection with wheat growing you have the usual handicap due to shortage of transport. The great provinces of the northwest yield immense quantities of wheat, but it cannot be transported to Eastern China, where it would bring four or five times the price that it fetches at home. Julean Arnold estimates that it costs from fifteen to twenty cents a ton-mile for transportation in Shensi by native methods as compared to one-seventeenth of a cent a ton-mile for haulage of wheat on American railways. Hence the more wheat the Shensi farmers raise the worse off they are, because it becomes a drug on their own market. In any consideration of Chinese industry you invariably reach the same blind wall reared by inadequacy of transport. Until China has at least 50,000 miles more of railway she cannot come into her own industrially.

All experts unite in the belief that after cotton, silk offers perhaps the best opportunity in Chinese industry. Here you touch one of the ancient activities of the Chinese, for in years gone by it vied with tea as the principal export. At the mention of Chinese tea and silk there is conjured up a picture of the old days when galleons sailed the high seas and the Chinese merchant was in reality a prince. China had the monopoly on both these commodities and they were known and dealt in wherever the trade winds blew. The phrase "China trade" was synonymous with wealth and commercial power, and it had a traditional background rich with the aroma of what romancers called the spices of the East.

Tea and silk, so far as export from China is concerned, have fallen on evil times. Eighty per-cent of America's supplies of raw silk now comes from Japan, while China provides only the remaining 20 percent. One reason is that the American high-speed machine looms cannot use the Chinese skein made for the Chinese hand looms, as it is too long and not uniform in texture. It does not meet the requirements of what is known as the standard American skein. Another reason is that for years diseases have ravaged the Chinese silkworm, whereas the Japanese employ more scientific methods in caring for the worm.

REFORMS IN SILK INDUSTRY

Since 1920, when the silk bubble burst in Japan silk production has been in a bad way in Japan and China, but notably in China. The Japanese trouble is due to inflation and mad speculation, while the Chinese dilemma grows out of general bad business conditions together with lack of standardisation in production. The Silk Association of America and the United States Department of Agriculture have combined to help China out of her hole. Sericulture is now being reorganised under scientific preceptorship.

The fact that Japan has snatched the bulk of the silk export from China is just another evidence of the value of science in modern industry. Most Chinese silk is much finer in quality than the Japanese, but Japan has got away with the trade because she has used more modern and therefore more aggressive methods. As a matter of fact many Japanese dealers buy silk in China and sell it as their own product. The Chinese silk trade, however, lacks the element of gambling which has on more than one occasion demoralised the Japanese market.

Chinese silk reform must begin with the raw material. The principal defect has been disease-ridden silkworms. Under the auspices of the International Society for the Improvement of Sericulture in China a campaign for improving worms has been inaugurated. The most conspicuous work is being done in the Sericulture Department of the Canton Christian College, which, by the way, is one of the most useful and practical institutions in the Far East and is located on the Pearl River, a short distance from Canton. Groves of mulberry trees have been set out here and immense numbers of certified egg sheets, as they are called, are being produced for sale to Chinese farmers. The result is that the worm crop is already 50 percent better. Good worms mean good cocoons, and therefore good silk. Just how much this helps the Chinese silk trade is revealed when I quote a well-known silk expert. He said:

"Without planting another acre in mulberry trees or investing another dollar in raising cocoons, the Shanghai district, with disease-free eggs, can raise from three to five times the amount of silk now produced. This means adding $50,000,000 gold to the wealth of the section." The Shanghai district, by the way, and the Canton area form the two most important silk-producing regions in China.

One agency in the reform of the Chinese silk industry is the Shanghai International Testing House, established largely through the efforts of the Silk Association of America, with Chinese co-operation. Silk that passes its test is accepted in any market on certificates from the testing house. A similar establishment will be set up in Canton, which is one of the great silk centers of China.

With their usual intelligence the Chinese are taking advantage of the aid given them by America. The filature system—a filature is the place where silk is spun from the cocoons—is being reorganized on a steam-power basis, so as to meet modern requirements. The effect can already be seen in silk export. A few years ago Canton was exporting from 15,000 to 20,000 bales of raw silk yearly. In 1921, 44,000 bales were shipped. Since the average price of a bale of silk is about $750 gold—in times of frenzied speculation it is four and five times this amount—you get some idea of the value of the silk business.

So with the weaving of silk cloth. Up to last year there were only a few modern silk-weaving establishments in all China. Most of the looms are still operated by hand. When I went to Hangchow I visited some of these establishments, which have not changed in method or equipment in a thousand years. Hangchow now has one large mill equipped with power looms and others are projected.

With silk as with cotton the tendency in China is toward modern industrialisation, and this in turn means progress. Turn to tea, and you find that medieval methods still obtain, with the result that the once immense tea trade is in eclipse. For years tea was almost as synonymous with China as was the pigtail. Now that the queue is nearly gone, China's tea export has almost followed it into oblivion. China introduced tea to the world, and in the great day of the overseas traffic in it her produce was preeminent. At one time she exported 300,000,000 pounds, one-third of which was consumed in Great Britain. Last year she shipped exactly 933,700 pounds to the United Kingdom. This tells the whole story. Never was there such a mighty fall in business.

On account of the enormous home consumption China probably grows more tea than the rest of the world combined, but she is unable to renew her grip on overseas distribution. The first and foremost dent in her trade was put there by the Indian and Ceylon product, which is not only cheaper but is produced along up-to-date lines. In China tea is not grown on plantations but is raised by individual farmers on small areas. The leaves are picked and withered in precisely the same way that they were centuries ago. In India and Ceylon, on the other hand, there are huge scientifically laid-out plantations, equipped with all modern mechanical aids. Moreover, the Indian and Ceylon planters have exploited their product in the markets of the world through the one best agency for merchandising, which is printer's ink. They have learned that it pays to advertise.

Another reason for the decline in Chinese tea exports is the virtual closing of the Russian market. Formerly the Russians were the greatest alien consumers of Chinese tea. Until the Bolsheviks played havoc with everything they absorbed more than 100,000,000 pounds of the China production each year. Even before the red horror broke, the Slavs were beginning to turn to the Indian article. Of course China's tea trade with Russia is only temporarily halted, but meanwhile the disruption plays havoc with the tea growers.

The tea season of 1920-21 was probably the most disastrous ever known to Chinese dealers. H. H. Fox, the British commercial counselor for China, is authority for the statement that in May, 1920, Chinese black tea was practically unsaleable. Only 30,000 half chests of Hunan and Hupeh tea were produced and the bluk of it remains unsold to this day. The normal output in these two areas is 400,000 half chests.

China faces the alternative of improving her tea product and lessening the cost, or losing the trade altogether. The Chinese appreciate the seriousness of the situation, and what is termed a tea [illegible] has been established under the auspices of the Ministry of Agriculture and Commerce, and an effort will be made to standardize tea in the same way that silk culture is being improved. The Chinese pin their faith on a revival of their trade in America. They believe that since the enactment of the Volstead Law the United States must substitute another beverage in the place of alcohol, and they hope it will be their tea.

Cotton, flour and silk are merely details in a growing industrialisation that is expanding to a score of commodities. In one of the previous articles I showed how the soy bean had made Manchuria not only famous but also rich. Practically the entire bean output is grown by Chinese, although the milling and marketing are largely in Japanese hands. China has speeded up her output of porcelains, hides, metals and minerals, straw braid, sugar, carpets, cigarettes, glassware, matches, ivory novelties, leather and laces.

Certain picturesque Chinese industries are worth more than passing mention. Nearly everybody has read about the ancient eggs which form a strong—I use the word advisedly—feature of every banquet, and the Chinese are long on banquets, both as to the food and time consumed. These eggs, however, are not confined to formal dinners. Everybody who can afford to buy eats them. They are sold on the streets by innumerable venders. In China half the restaurants seem to be portable.

Quite naturally the Westerner has got the idea that these hoary eggs are really old. Certainly they taste old, when you have conquered your sense of taste and smell and eat one. As a matter of fact few of these blackened eggs are really old. A Chinese expert informed me that you can make a "fifty-year-old egg" overnight by cooking it in lime, which congeals it and gives it a gamy flavor. Since all "old" eggs look and taste alike to the average Chinese, this overnight maturity, which compresses fifty years into a yesterday, makes little difference.

TRAFFIC IN VINTAGE EGGS

The egg business, therefore, is one of the great staples of China. Since 80 percent of the population are in agriculture almost everyone raises eggs and has chickens. Being thrifty souls, they sell and do not consume the output. Many unique methods are used to supplement natural hatching. In some sections a brick or mud stove is used as an incubator. Elsewhere, alternate layers of heated rice husks and eggs are placed in a tub, the heated husks being changed every day. In remote rural districts old men and women hatch eggs successfully by carrying them in their clothing. This is not surprising, for the aged on the farms seldom wash or change their garments.

Nearly 500,000,000 whole eggs either fresh or preserved, were exported from China last year, while the total egg output of eight provinces, including Shantung, the heart of the egg belt, was 1,500,000,000. Thus the helpful hen is a real factor in Chinese commerce. The Chinese have also developed a considerable industry in yolks and albumen. In normal years the exports of these ingredients alone aggregate 40,000,000 pounds and are worth over $15,000,000 gold.

Another unique industry is in human hair and hair nets. For years the exports of hair from China have averaged more than 3,000,000 pounds a year. The business got a tremendous boom following the overthrow of the Manchu dynasty, when the cutting of queues became general. The ordinary supply of hair is increased by combings from barber-shop cuttings, and by women, who frequently sell their hair in times of financial trouble. More hair nets are exported from China than from any other country. The industry was introduced into China by the Germans shortly after they acquired the leased territory in Shantung. Chifu, however, is the center of the trade, and exported 2,000,000 gross of hair nets last year. Here the hair is bleached and dyed and made up for the American markets in assorted colors. I traveled from Hongkong to Seattle with a merchant known as the Hair Net King, who told me that his business alone amounts to nearly $5,000,000 a year.

All this leads to the important fact that China's foreign trade, despite the world business slump and the decline in silver—the country is on a silver basis—has grown steadily. In 1920 the exports amounted to 541,631,300 haikwan taels, while the imports were 762,250,230 haikwan taels, a total volume of 1,303,881,530 haikwan taels. Ten years ago China's entire foreign commerce amounted to only 843,798,222 taels. In China foreign trade does not as yet enter into the life of the people in anything like the same proportions that obtain with Western nations. China's overseas business per capita is barely one-fiftieth of that of the United States.

The preceding reference to haikwan taels brings us to a brief but necessary explanation of Chinese currency, which is almost as complicated as the national politics. Like the country itself it needs unification and standardisation. Although customs, foreign trade, taxes and wealth generally are reckoned in taels, there is no such coin. A tael is a weight of silver, and weighs an ounce. For modern trade purposes it does not appear actually in transactions and in a nominal or bookkeeping unit. Like the English guinea, it is a money of account. When used, it comes in what is known as sycee shoes of fifty taels, which means that this piece of silver, which is really shaped like a Chinese shoe, weighs fifty ounces. Off the beaten path the traveler must carry these shoes and lop off pieces of silver in payment for whatever he buys.

This feature in itself would be bad enough, but there are no fewer than one hundred and seventy different taels, for nearly every community has its own idea of an ounce. It has been said that if a man starts across China with a given amount of silver, ten exchange transactions will eat up his capital wthout the purchase of a single article. The money changer is no altruist.

China being a silver country, the visitor to a big port like Shanghai is immediately impressed by what seems to be the recklessness with which bullion is handled. He sees an almost endless succession of silver bars sliding down a board from the side of a ship or watches a coolie complacently carrying two boxes of silver, swung from a pole, down the street. No watchman is to be observed and yet there is never any theft. One reason is that the bars, or shoes, are too heavy to make a quick get-away, and another is that the sycee is a bank token, and no merchant would accept it from an unvouched customer. It is an interesting commentary on the Chinese that this bullion is safer on the streets of Shanghai than was gold on the highways of New York City back in the time when daily transfers were made with sacks of the yellow metal.

The two official taels are the haikwan, which is used in the customs service, and the kuping, or treasury tael, which is employed for land taxes. American business men best know the Shanghai and Tientsin taels. Every one of these taels has a different value, but for the sake of popular explanation it may be said that at the present rates of exchange they range from 75 to 80 cents gold.

CASTORIA
for Infants and Children.

The Effects of Opiates.

THAT INFANTS are peculiarly susceptible to opium and its various preparations, all of which are narcotic, is well known. Even in the smallest doses, if continued, these opiates cause changes in the functions and growth of the cells, which are likely to become permanent, causing imbecility, mental perversion, a craving for alcohol or narcotics in later life. Nervous diseases, such as intractable nervous dyspepsia and lack of staying power, are a result of dosing with opiates or narcotics to keep children quiet in their infancy. The rule among physicians is that children should never receive opiates in the smallest doses for more than a day at a time, and only then if unavoidable.

The administration of Anodynes, Drops, Cordials, Soothing Syrups and other narcotics to children by any but a physician cannot be too strongly decried, and the druggist should not be a party to it. Children who are ill need the attention of a physician, and it is nothing less than a crime to dose them wilfully with narcotics. Castoria contains no narcotics if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

The signature of Chas. H. Fletcher guarantees genuine Castoria

Physicians Recommend Castoria.

"Your preparation known as Castoria I have used for years in children's complaints and I have found nothing better."
JOHN J. LEFFA, M. D., Cleveland, Ohio.

"For several years I recommended your 'Castoria' and shall always continue to do so, as it has invariably produced beneficial results."
EDWIN F. PARDEE, M. D., New York City.

"Your Castoria is a meritorious household remedy. It is purely vegetable and acts as a mild cathartic. Above all, it does no harm, which is more than can be said of the great majority of children's remedies."
VICTOR H. COFFMAN, M. D., Omaha, Neb.

"I have prescribed your Castoria in many cases and have always found it an efficient and speedy remedy."
A. F. PERLEE, M. D., St. Louis, Mo.

"I have used your Castoria in my own household with good results, and have advised several patients to use it for its mild, laxative effect and freedom from harm."
EDWARD PARRISH, M. D., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Your Castoria holds the esteem of the medical profession in a manner held by no other proprietary preparation. It is a sure and reliable medicine for infants and children. In fact it is the universal household remedy for infantile ailments."
J. A. PARKER, M. D., Kansas City, Mo.

CHURCH BLAMES PARTY POLITICS' CLAMMY HANDS

Responsible For Delay In The Solution Of Problems Is The Charge

(China Press Service)

Washington, Nov. 9.—"The dead hand of party politics is responsible for the delay in solving the problems of the world," according to Dr. Charles S. Macfarland, General Secretary, in a report to the Administrative Committee of the Federal Council of Churches, made public today.

He declares that the churches of the world must demand for the chief magistrates and ministers of state of the nations the freedom from political control new enjoyed in some measure by judges of court.

Dr. Macfarland has just returned from a trip to Europe, in which he came in contact with leading men in England, France, Germany, Belgium, Holland, Denmark, and Sweden. He states that there is a growing feeling among the people of all countries, including our own, that the present confusion in world politics is in a large measure due to the fact that men in power are seeking first to maintain their own administrations; second, to uphold their respective parties, and third after taking care of the other two, to do what they can for their country. This selfishness and lack of real patriotism, he states, has prevented the solution of the economic problems which are at the background of all troubles of the world. He said:

NO NARROW QUESTIONS

"Wise men in all countries are thinking very deeply upon questions which do not narrow down to any one nation or to any one political party or administration within a nation. They are asking:

"How far are our ills due to the lamentable fact that governments act for party considerations rather than solely for the good of the nation?

"How far do governments seek to express the highest sentiments of the people?

"How far do they seek intelligent enlightment of the people as to the good of the nation and of humanity?

"How far do they allow the people to rest in blind and helpless fealty to party interests?

"Can these governments shake off the party shackles that now bind them and leave administrations free to seek the good of nations and humanity without the dead hand of party concern? If any one great nation can answer this question, the rest of the world would react to such moral leadership.

"Is it not an obvious and admitted fact that, to put it cautiously, political leaders have, not one concern, but three which sometimes become mutually exclusive, first, the obligation to maintain their party administration, second, to conserve the interests of the party, often without any clear principles or aims, and finally, the interests of the nation and the world at large. And the latter have to be adjusted to the two preceding.

MUST FIND VOICE

"It is clear that the church throughout the world must find her voice and utterance demanding freedom for chief Magistrates and Ministers of State, such as we now have in some measue for the judges of courts, so that the dead hand of partisan and personal politics shall be forever cut off from the body politic.

"The present need of the world cannot wait for this, but the same public sentiment that will yet arise to guide our wavering feet, will be but the unconscious expression of this greater, ultimate ideal.

"The churches must ponder these questions. Those who attended the great gathering of the European Protestant churches at Copenhagen, or the World Alliance of Churches at the same city, have no doubt that the Gospel of Christ is so great and so all-embracing of humanity as to have in it the moral and spiritual principles for solving the problems of the world."

French Abbe's Device For Discovering Oil

Paris, Oct. 12.—His perfection of an invention for the locating of underground bodies of oil and minerals, by means of which prospectors may estimate their depth within a few feet, is announced, by the Abbe Estines of Toulouse, a doctor of physics and mathematics and former professor of sciences in the College of Poliguan. The invention is based on the principle of radioactivity and was suggested to the priest's mind by the affirmation of an English physicist in 1905, after tho discovery of radium, that "all metals radiate." Twelve years were spent in working out the idea, but now, according to the inventor, he has an instrument which will rob the depths of the earth of their secrets. The Abbe Estines refuses to disclose any facts regarding his instrument, except to say that it weighs 200 pounds and operates best between the hours of 2 and 7 in the morning, when the ground is cool.

As to the value of the instrument, tho Abbe declares that it will be proved in the next few years by the flowing of oil in France. Through the use of this instrument, he says, France will be able produce enough oil not only for her own consumption, but for export. He does not intend to patent his invention or to form a syndicate for its exploitation, but will place it at the disposal of the French government for locating oil in the Pyrenees.

According to the inventor, oil exists throughout the department of Aude Ariege and Hautes Pyrenees. He expects to prospect soon in Haute Garonne, where he believes oil exists, but he says the oil pockets of Puy de Dome are too shallow to be profitably exploited.

The Abbe Estines says he has located oil lakes at Guipuzcoa, in Spain, though no Spanish geologists suspected its presence in that district.

NEW SHIP LAUNCHED

A coastal survey steamer 135'9" x 17'." 2 11'6" was launched Monday afternoon at the yard of the Societe Franco-Chinoise de Constructions Metalliques et Mecaniques. The vessel was christened by Mme. Se Heng-tsiu in the presence of a large number of Chinese and foreign guests. This vessel which will be completed before the end of the year is to be one of the fastest ever launched from a Shanghai shipyard as she is expected to attain a speed of about 18 knots per hour.

Admiral's Death Recalls Odd Jest

We do not think often nowadays of the anxieties and feats of the Spanish War. The death of Rear Admiral Charles E. Clark brings back vividly, however, an adventure which was rightly a nine days' wound at the time of its occurrence.

It will be remembered that while Cervera's whereabouts were unknown Captain Clark was intrusted with the dangerous task of bringing the Oregon from the Pacific coast to augment the Atlantic fleet. He left San Francisco on March 19, 1898, and sixty-seven days later steamed into Jupiter Inlet, on the coast of Florida, unharmed and ready for battle.

There was no Panama Canal in '98, and between Captain Clark and his destination lay the turbulent waters of the Horn and possible attack by a Spanish torpedo boat.

During Captain Clark's historic voyage he passed Capt. Joshua Slocum voyaging alone around the world in the little 9-ton Spray. Slocum did not know of the declaration of war against Spain. It was therefore an alarming sight to find the Oregon flying the sights C B T, which meant, 'Are there any men-of-war about?"

Captain Slocum signaled back "No," and as the Oregon passed by hoisted the international code flags which meant, "Let us keep together for mutual protection." In the account of his voyage he wrote that Captain Clark did not seem to regard this signal as necessary!

We wonder if any naval officer can tell us whether or not Slocum's signal was made out on board the Oregon, Slocum says that the Oregon's great flag dipped beautifully in reply to the lowered colors of the Spray. We suspect that if Captain Clark had made out the Spray's final signal he would have replied to it in a manner worthy of Slocum's gallant jest.

Rear Admiral Clark was 79 years old at the time of the death. He belonged to a naval tradition for he was in a ship which followed Farragut over the torpedoes and past the forts in the battle of Mobile Bay. Rear-Admiral Clark retired from active service in 1905 on his 62d birthday.

Isadora Duncan Startles Boston

Boston.—Concluding one of the most amazing performances ever witnessed in Boston, Isadora Duncan, modern originator of the classical dance, waved a flaming red scarf which a moment before had been the major part of her costume in a Tschaikowsky program at Symphony Hall and shouted: "This is red; that is what I am." She shook the symbol of revolt in the faces of the spectators and cried, "Don't let them tame you."

The remarks from the stage followed a dance program which shocked the vast audience because of the lack of costume to such an extent that more than three-quarters of them left the hall, amid the taunts of the daring performer.

Miss Duncan came on the stage to dance Tschaikowsky's "Symphony No. 66." Her costume was exceedingly scant and the upper part persisted in slipping down. Later, as the contortions and writhings of the dancer became even wilder, it slipped down only to remain down. The crowd held their breath, for it seemed the dancer would lose what little she had left on her body.

It was in the finale of this number that Miss Duncan overstepped all bounds. She came out in a dark transparent gown which left absolutely nothing to the imagination.

EMANCIPATION OF WOMEN IS GINLING TOPIC

Girls' School Students Are Urged To Go Along Service Lines

(China Press Correspondence)

Nanking, Nov. 14.—The Ginling College Eighth Annual Founders' Day Exercises were held yesterday in the College chapel. The Rev. S. Peter Chuan, of the China Home Missionary Society, was the first speaker. Mr. Chuan took for his subject "Promoting rather than Enjoying Happiness." In a thoughtful and stimulating address, the speaker told his audience that the present habit in China of imitating the Occident and taking up customs and styles because they were new was not a constructive policy, and that it did not result in promoting the welfare of the people.

He showed that really to benefit society constructive thought and planning was necessary and that the will to serve society would be of lasting benefit only if based on such constructive foundations.

In reference to the emancipation of Chinese womanhood he urged the students of the College to take the lead in making clear what was helpful and useful in the new order, so enabling them to avoid the dangers of the present.

In years past, the second speaker of the day has been a foreigner, but this year the second address was made by the Rev. Y. C. James Yen, of the National Committee of the Y.M.C.A. Mr. Yen spoke about "College Spirit." He referred to the spirit of Yale, his own Alma Mater, and showed how that spirit of service was shown in the lives of the men who had gone through that institution.

He reminded the students that they would soon be going to the new campus with its larger buildings and its better equipment but that the spirit of the new Ginling depended on what kind of spirit they, as individual students, carried to the new campus. He urged his hearers to develop a spirit of service that would make itself felt, not only in college, but in society where the opportunities of carrying out the principles of Christian usefulness among the women of China are so great.

As is customary each year, the name of the student in the previous Freshman year who had maintained the highest scholastic grade was announced at the close of the exercises. Miss Dju Ao, of Hunan, led the class, while honorable mention was made of Miss Djang Hsiang-lan, of Shantung, and Miss Djang Djang, of Shanghai.

JAPANESE AGREE TO CHINA'S VIEW UPON HOSPITAL

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Nov. 19.—The first Section of the Sino-Japanese Joint Commission held its thirty-sixth meeting at the Waichiaopu on November 18 at 4.00 p.m. The following questions were taken up:

(1) The Chinese Commission brought up a new proposal concerning maintenance of Tsingtao Hospital properties which Japan desired to be retained. The Japanese Commissioners declined to agree to it. It was decided to hold further discussion of this question, together with the question of the Second Primary School.

(2) The Japanese Commissioners declared that no item had been left out of the inventory of public properties. Everything had been submitted.

(3) The Japanese Commissioners wished to have definite arrangements about ports to be opened along the Kiaochao-Tsinanfu Railway expedited. The Chinese Commissioners stated in reply that this could be taken up directly with the Waichaopu.

(4) The Chinese Commission brought up in a statement their reply to the proposal of the Japanese Commissioners regarding the disposal of land question. The Japanese Commission continued to adhere to their original proposal.

The meeting adjourned at 7.00 p.m. until 10.00 a.m. next Monday.
